Finns Surround 2 Crack Soviet Divisions In East

Reds Suffer in 50-Below Cold

Helsinki Says 'Best' Russian Troops Cut Off From Supplies After Days of Guerilla Warfare; Declares 'Important Developments' Due.

(By International News Service)

HELSINKI—While intense cold that plunged to more than 50 degrees below zero added to the suffering in bomb-wrecked Finnish towns, reports from the eastern battle zone indicated today that Finnish troops have cut the rear communications of two crack Red army divisions on the Salla front.

A statement in the official communique—"near the eastern frontier at Salla our troops dispersed two enemy companies"—and late advices to the capital combined to show that two Soviet divisions there finally have been cut off from their supply bases after days of guerrilla warfare.

The Russian divisions, described as troops from the Ukraine and the best Soviet soldiers yet seen in Finland, have been moving from Salla in the direction of Kemijaervi.

Military reports to Helsinki said that Finnish commanders expected important events shortly on the Salla front despite the intensely cold weather which has been hampering operations for the past few days.

The defeat of the two Russian companies announced yesterday was believed to mark a preliminary stage of a renewed Finnish attempt to surround and annihilate the two Russian divisions which have been defending themselves vigorously against raids launched by Finnish ski fighters.

Swedes Aid Finns.

(A dispatch from Stockholm said that a corps of Swedish volunteers is now somewhere in Finland, ready for action, under command of Col. Magnus Dryssen, who left a Swedish regiment to enter the Finnish service.

(Dryssen was quoted as saying that the Swedish fighters were picked men who had received military training, and that some of them had served in the Spanish civil war and the French Foreign Legion.

(The volunteer corps possesses first-class equipment, the report added.)

While major ground operations were restricted owing to the weather, between 70 and 80 Soviet planes carried out bombardments of interior Finland yesterday. Hundreds of civilians whose homes were wrecked by the raids were left without adequate shelter in the bitter weather.

The Finnish air force replied by bombarding Russian troop detachments. Finnish pursuit planes and anti-aircraft batteries brought down four more Soviet bombers.

At Hangoe 11 fires raged as a result of repeated raids by planes which dropped incendiary bombs, while at Ekenaes 400 of the town's 700 houses were in ruins as a result of daily bombings which have made Ekenaes famous as "Finland's Guernica."

Abo, also in southern Finland, was heavily raided and 30 persons there were reported to have been killed.

As a result of the Red air raids, Finnish authorities decided to en-

NITRO BLAST ROCKS JERSEY, 5 FEARED DEAD

Explosion at du Pont Plant Shakes 50-Mile Area, Panics Residents in Towns.

BREAKS SCHOOL WINDOWS

First Reports Indicate All Pupils Led to Safety; Aid Rushed to Scene.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(UP)— The federal bureau of investigation today said that it is investigating the explosion in the du Pont experimental laboratories at Gibbstown, N. J.

(By United Press)

GIBBSTOWN, N. J.—An explosion in the dynamite mixing plant of the E. I. du Pont De Nemous and company laboratories here shook southern New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania today.

First reports said five men were in the plant when the explosion occurred.

The explosion shattered the windows of the nearby Gibbstown school building. First reports said there were no casualties at the school and that all children were sent home.

Windows of stores and houses in a 50-mile area were reported broken by the blast.

New Jersey state police and ambulances from hospitals in the area were dispatched to the scene.

State police at the Mantua, N. J., sub-station said they had no reports of casualties, and understood that the school children had been sent home for fear of another explosion.

Residents Panicky.

Residents in the area shook by the blast became so panicky that newspaper offices, the Philadelphia Electrical Bureau and telephone exchanges were flooded with calls.

Gibbstown is a village of about 300 and the du Pont plants are its only industry. Most of the du Pont employes live in nearby points.

It is across the Delaware river, about 10 miles from Philadelphia.

The main offices of the du Pont company at Wilmington, Del., said 6,000-pounds of nitro-glycerine were stored in the plant in which the explosion occurred.

"Two men should have been in or near the plant when the explosion happened," a du Pont spokesman said. "We are now checking to determine their fate."

"An explosion occurred about 10:30 a. m. today in one of the units used in the manufacture of nitroglycerine at the Repauno plant of the du Pont company," he said. "An estimated 6,000 pounds of nitroglycerine exploded."

One Unit Involved.

Several hundred men are employed normally at the chemical works. du Pont officials said the rest of the plant was not seriously damaged, according to first reports, and the nitroglycerine unit was the only one involved.

The exact cause of the blast was not immediately determined.

High loss of life and great property damage was averted, it was pointed out, because of the peculiar construction of the units, which are placed in isolated spots.

EARL LONG: "Friend of the poor."

SAM JONES: they say he's Big Business' little pal.

2ND LOUISIANA PRIMARY LOOMS

Long's Diminishing Lead Puts Nomination in Doubt; Jones in Second Place.

(By Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS—Democratic gubernatorial primary returns drifting in from county parishes today whittled down a substantial lead built up in New Orleans yesterday by Governor Earl K. Long, seeking to continue in power the political dynasty founded by his brother, Huey.

It was indicated the combined vote of the four "reform" candidates would make a second primary necessary on Feb. 20. The 12-year-old dictatorship never before has had to go into a runoff election.

In second place, well behind Long, was Sam Jones, Lake Charles attorney, who was being challenged for the runoff position by State Senator James A. Noe, former Long lieutenant who broke with the administration after Huey's death. James H. Morrison, Hammond attorney, was fourth, and Vincent Moseley, Opelouses attorney, fifth.

In the campaign between Long and Jones, the latter was called the "little pal" of big business and

'BOOM' TO STAY

Department Store Officials See Upward Trend Continue.

NEW YORK—(INS)—A business "boomlet" that appeared towards the end of 1939 in the nation's retail trade may carry over into 1940, delegates at the 29th annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods association reported today.

Department store executives interviewed at random from among the delegates reported business improvements in 1939 that topped those of the 1937 peak and in some cases were comparable with 1929. A variety of reasons were given.

Business now is in the "recovery phase" of a true business cycle, the delegates were told by Dr. Lewis H. Haney, financial writer for the Hearst newspapers.

"This is reasonably certain," Dr. Haney said. "It means at least a few months more of 'prosperity,' probably at least nine months."

The 48-year-old Communist party secretary, his party's presidential candidate in 1936, was the first person indicted following investigation into what the government charges was a communist passport mill.

PREDICT COLD TO 'HANG ON' REST OF WEEK

Weathermen See Frigid Wave Continuing; 3-Inch Snow Blankets Central Ohio.

Driving Hazardous in Some Sections; Lake Region Fights Snowdrifts.

You might as well be prepared for at least three more days of frigid weather, the men who do the forecasting promised today after a snowfall of nearly three inches blanketed most of central Ohio and shoved the mercury down to as low as seven degrees above zero.

The Mansfield area along with the rest of north central Ohio faced the prospect of more snow flurries and even colder weather with the forecast calling for "somewhat colder tonight and contained cold Thursday, Friday and Saturday."

With the temperature dipping to seven degrees above last night, Mansfield was one of the coldest spots in the state. A reading of seven also was recorded at Toledo and Fremont while it was 18 above at Cincinnati, the warmest city in the state.

There was little rise in the temperature today. The thermometer reading at noon was 10 above, seven degrees below the 17 degrees recorded yesterday noon.

Snow General In State.

Light snow flurries were general throughout the state today and the deep snow which covered highways made driving hazardous as ice formed in some sections of the state. Snowdrifts complicated travel on roads in the lake region.

Highway department crews in the Mansfield area along with those throughout the state as well as city workmen scattered cinders and salt through the night to keep driving lanes open.

Transportation was slowed in the city and on the highways as motorists battled blinding gusts driven before a sharp wind.

Roscoe Turner, holder of many air speed records, was forced down on a farm near Chillicothe when his plane ran out of fuel. He and William Gage, an FBI agent who Turner was flying to West Virginia fastened the ship to a barn and spent the night at a farmhouse.

Amos G. Miller, 72, retired Columbus grocer, was killed this morning by an automobile driven by Ellsworth Baldwin, Bucyrus. Miller had just finished cleaning the snow off a neighbor's walks and was crossing the street to his home.

A blinding snow storm caused the death of Franklin J. Joughin, 20, Morenci, Mich., when his automobile went off the road and over a 20-foot embankment near Wauseon.

YOUTH ADMITS KILLING FATHER

21-Year-Old Son Confesses, Says Victim Mean to Wife.

SALEM, Ill.—(INS)—Confession of 21-year-old Edgar Campbell of St. Louis that he shot and killed his father, and then set fire to his father's house in an attempt to conceal the crime, was announced today by State's Attorney Ward P. Holt.

The victim was William T. Campbell, 70, a well to do farmer. His body was found in the ruins of his home Monday night after the son had run, nude, about half a mile to the home of a neighbor to report the fire.

"I killed my father because he was mean to my mother," Holt quoted the youth.

Quads Born to Alabama Sharecropper's Wife

Quadruplets born to Mrs. Clyde Short, 36, are pictured in the two-room farm cabin 18 miles from Jasper, Ala., where they were born. They later were transferred to Walker County hospital in Jasper. Mrs. Short is the wife of a sharecropper and coal miner. The first three babies were girls and were named Faith, Hope and Charity. A boy arrived one hour and twenty minutes after the first delivery.

Today, M. C. McGehee, bachelor president of the Texas Gulf Producing company at Houston, Tex., said he wired the family $1,000. He told Dr. H. J. Sankey, the 65-year-old country doctor, who attended the quads, to "use the money any way he thought best."

Ohio Dems First to Support Third Term

Pivotal State's Delegates Pledged to Roosevelt, Then Donahey as 'Favorite Son' Candidate for Presidency.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Third term backing for President Roosevelt came today from politically-pivotal Ohio's Democrats—the first state organization to make such a move.

Delegates being lined up for the Democratic presidential convention will be required to support Mr. Roosevelt for renomination and be "in accord" with the New Deal, State Chairman Arthur L. Limbach announced here yesterday.

This surprisingly unequivocal stand created intense interest in Washington and other political circles.

While pro-New Deal state organization leaders previously expressed hope the president would seek another term, there had been no indication the delegation would be instructed specifically how to cast Ohio's 52 important votes.

Delegates nominally will be pledged to U. S. Sen. Vic Donahey as a "favorite son"—primarily to meet state election law requirements—but Limbach said that should the first ballot trend go strongly for Mr. Roosevelt Ohio would cast its vote as a unit for him.

Limbach anticipates, however, that President Roosevelt will decline renomination and then will outline a pattern for a successor that will fit only Associate Justice William O. Douglas, youngest member of the United States supreme court.

The delegates will be required to sign a pledge reading, "I am in accord with and will support the

Three of the men in the building jumped from the second story window to escape the flames and were injured. The remaining 13 were taken from the second story by firemen's ladders.

Two firemen were less seriously injured.

Of the 50 passengers aboard, 30 were booked to sail to the United States from Stockholm aboard a Swedish-American liner.

Warns All U. S. Departments to Operate Within Appropriations

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The budget director, Harold D. Smith, warned all federal agencies today to go into training for next year's program of reduced expenditures by living within their appropriations for the current year.

He promised to be "plenty tough" on any requests for deficiency appropriations and said that, as far as practicable, he would hold up such requests for extra funds until they could be considered in relation to the general budgetary situation.

Last session, there were three omnibus deficiency appropriation acts and several individual ones. Not county relief, which had not received a full year's appropriation, these acts added $373,097,945 onto annual allotments already made by congress.

Smith explained that President Roosevelt, in his recent budget message which estimated a net deficit of $3,932,813,641 for the current fiscal year and $2,176,231,570 next year, unless the latter is reduced by new taxes for "emergency" defense outlays, left little room for deficiency appropriations.

"I can't see," the budget director said, "why agencies should have deficiencies unless they run into emergencies or congress gives them additional duties."

He hinted that the past practice of permitting deficiency appropriations might have led some bureaus to overspend deliberately because they thought they could get more money.

Where extra funds may be needed by some particular government office to fill out this year, Smith added, he would try to get other related agencies to help out so that no additional money would have to be voted.

STARTS SURVEY ON ROUTE 30-N

State Takes First Steps on Grade Separation Project West of City.

First steps toward the construction of a grade separation project of U. S. route 30 N, west of Mansfield, was taken today by the state highway department as it started a survey of the two sites and the highway.

Murray D. Shaffer, division highway engineer at Ashland, under whose supervision the work is being done, said the crew was gathering data preliminary to drafting plans for the project.

The job is expected to take at least 30 days and information will then be taken to Columbus where the bridge bureau will consult with the railroad on design of the proposed structures, Shaffer explained.

Plans call for the construction of an overpass over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at the western edge of the city and an underpass at the Erie railroad a mile farther west. A 40-foot pavement is to be constructed between the two structures.

The cost of the project has been estimated at nearly $500,000 and will be met jointly by the federal government, the railroads, the state, city and county.

OBSERVE DAY

Schools to Hold Temperance Programs Friday.

Pupils in Mansfield public schools will spend two hours Friday studying the harmful effects of drugs, alcohol, and tobacco as the city's schools observe "Temperance Day."

Temperance educational programs will be given at all the schools in compliance with an order of the state department of education.

Educational literature distributed by the Ohio director of education has been received by principals of the schools to help them in arranging programs, Supt. W. L. Miller said.

The state law setting up "Temperance Day" requires that "information relative to the history of the movement and of the physiological values of temperance shall be given the pupils."

BURGLAR, $20,000 IN LOOT SOUGHT

Locks Society Woman, Maid In Closet; Misses Other Gems.

NEW YORK—(INS)—An intensive police hunt was on today for a timid and nervous burglar who locked Mrs. Vincent Hubbell, an internationally known society woman, and her maid in the closet of their Park avenue apartment and ransacked it of $20,000 worth of jewelry.

The women finally freed themselves by breaking the closet door with a shelf which they wrenched loose. The nervous burglar overlooked $25,000 which Mrs. Hubbell had hidden under her bed before retiring. He entered the apartment in the guise of a delivery boy.

SABOTAGE: British Hear of Nazi Plot on Rail Lines, Bridges

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Great Britain's 600,000 railway workers were reported ordered on the alert today for acts of sabotage against the nation's lines.

The vast "detective" system was understood to have been set up as the Daily Mail and Daily Herald reported that a plot by the German intelligence service to cripple the nation's railway network had been discovered.

The Daily Mail said the plot was aimed at public works and bridges. No arrests have been announced. The newspaper declared the conspiracy had been discovered only a few days ago, and that "counter measures" were expected to be put into effect shortly.

Meanwhile, the government was believed to be taking steps to find a place for Leslie Hore-Belisha in the war cabinet.

A move to set up a ministry co-ordinating all Britain's economic war efforts with Hore-Belisha as its head gained momentum as echoes of his "public hearing" in parliament over dismissal as war minister died away.

The proposed ministry, it was explained, would have a broader scope than the present ministry of economic warfare headed by Ronald Hibbert Cross.

The pro-government press termed the Hore-Belisha resignation a "closed incident," while critical newspapers expressed disappointment that statements by Hore-Belisha and Prime Minister Chamberlain in the house of commons yesterday failed to disclose specific reasons for the change.

Chamberlain's statement that "it may not be long" before Hore-Belisha may serve in another position added to speculation that he might become the economic minister.

WARNING: Tells Italy She Might Have to Take Up Arms

(By United Press)

ROME—Italy may at any time be faced with the necessity of taking up arms, General Ettore Muti, secretary general of the Fascist party, warned today.

Addressing a gathering of Fascist federal secretaries, Muti said:

"We must not sleep in the illusion that Italy's present stand regarding the conflict will be perpetual. Fascist Italy might find itself at any moment faced with the necessity and duty of taking up arms.

"We must therefore be ready with arms and above all in spirit."

Virginio Gayda, who is close to the foreign office, commented in the Giornale D'Italia on Muti's speech:

"More than ever Italy today must defend her interests and freedom of action. There have been many evident foreign attempts to control Italian political conscience for the purpose of making Italy assume trends which are against Italian interests and Fascist viewpoints.

"Muti's speech confirms that Fascist Italy is unchangeably faithful to he spiritual, political and social aims which have been her basis since the beginning of Fascism."

It was announced after the meeting of the Fascist secretaries that the council of ministers, with Premier Benito Mussolini presiding, will convene on Jan. 20. The supreme defense council, with Mussolini presiding, will convene on Feb. 8.

Forecast Defeat of Roosevelt's Plan to Aid Finland

LEADERS SAY LEGISLATION WON'T PASS

Move Faces Certain Delay and Possible Defeat; Loans to Foreign Nations Hit.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Certain delay and probable rejection today faced President Roosevelt's proposal for enlarging export-import bank capital to provide a loan for Finland.

Privately, some of the most vigorous supporters admitted the move was "a dead duck" Even Senate Democratic Leader Barkley refused to predict that Finnish aid legislation would pass.

Committees Weigh Plan.

Two senate committees considered the proposal, embodied in identical letters the president sent Speaker Bankhead and Vice President Garner. Before the banking committee was also the bill of Senator Brown (D) Michigan, calling for a $60,000,000 RFC loan to Finland. The foreign relations committee met with only the presidential letter before it, but with the senate pledged to submit any legislation approved by the banking committee to foreign relations committee study before final action.

There was plenty of trouble ahead for the Brown measure in the banking committee and Barkley predicted that if any legislation were reported it would be a re-drafted bill. Republican committeemen oppose any and all plans for loaning money to Finland on the ground it would violate the spirit of American neutrality.

Bitterest opposition to the entire proposition was displaved among the membership of the foreign relations committee. Prominent members of this committee in both Democratic and Republican ranks predicted Finnish aid measures would be pigeon-holed by the committee.

"I can't predict what will happen to the legislation before either committee," Barkley said.

Senator Connally (D) Texas who demanded that the foreign relations committee be given the proposal to study, opposes any Finnish aid.

"It's taking sides," he said. "It's setting a bad precedent. We shouldn't make any loans to any foreign country."

The injured were taken to Waycross, Ga., hospitals, 25 miles away. The other 63 passengers boarded another train at Waycross for the east.

Irwin, Philadelphia; Miss Leon Tine Friedman, New York City; Ash Leigh Halliwell, Stamford, Conn.; Samuel Johnson and Booker T. Washington, train cooks, of Washington, D. C.

Up and Down THE STREET

A hitchhiker's life is anything but soft—especially in winter, two Mansfield business men found the other night. After attending a "stag" party on the other side of Butler, they were stranded through a mix-up in transportation arrangements. So they hiked to the main road. Finding it difficult to walk in the snow, they attempted to "thumb" a ride, but their technique must have been poor, as they failed to stop a motorist until five miles and several hours of walking. Today they were still attempting to find out how they were left behind by friends.

No one will ever get tired of seeing W. C. "Cap" Statler's pictures in the newspaper. Last week he declined to sit for a photograph for a story and later when a News-Journal cameraman went to City building to take pictures for a Sunday series of stories, the city engineer ducked out the back door and didn't return until the picture snapping was completed. "Two reasons," he explains, "One is that I am camera-shy, and the other is that someone would be sure to say 'What's his mug in the paper for?' "

Roy Vaughn, president of the Parks commission, was having his troubles today and there didn't seem to be any immediate solution. During freezing weather the park lakes are much in demand for skating. The continued snows covering the ice spoil it for this sport and dozens of skaters have called him to have the fire department turn the hose on the ice so that the water could flush off the snow and at the same time form a new coat of ice. But it doesn't work out that way, Vaughn says. The water coming through the hose is warmer than the surface of the lake and it finally gets through the ice and joins the water below the ice surface. Which doesn't help a bit.

Other officers named were Donovan Rummel of Ontario, vice president; Miss Marianne Springer, secretary; Douglas Thomas of Bellville, treasurer, and R. Byron Griest of Plymouth, song leader.

Arthur L. Glattke, Ohio State reformatory superintendent, is retiring president of the alumni.

Approximately 85 former students and friends of the college from Richland, Ashland and Crawford counties were present. Karl H. Lind, assistant professor of English and publicity director at Wittenberg, was the principal speaker. His subject was "News From the Campus."

A former Mansfield resident, Homer A. McFadden, now of Springfield, and Raymond A. Flook, Springfield, both national alumni vice presidents for the college, also spoke. D. L. Keyser, alumni secretary of Springfield, showed colored slides of Wittenberg campus life.

Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of the First Lutheran church, was toastmaster. Rev. H. H. Lentz of Ashland delivered the invocation, and the musical portion of the program was furnished by Griest, who played several piano selections, and Thomas, who presented a trumpet solo. Miss Ada Margaret Kommel of Rochester, Pa., and Robert Shepfer of Defiance, both students at Wittenberg, sang several vocal solos.

Rev. M. W. Wappner, chaplain at the Ohio State reformatory, and Rev. Herman L. Gilbert, pastor of the St. Paul Lutheran church, were in charge of the program.

5,000 Coal Drivers, Helpers Strike in N. Y.

FUEL DELIVERY HALTED WHILE MERCURY DROPS

Union's Action Affects Homes of Nearly 7,000,000; Seek $1.25 an Hour Rate.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Drivers handling 75 per cent of the city's coal deliveries were called out on strike today as the temperature dropped and a cold wave embraced the nation's largest city.

The strike affected 2,500 drivers and 2,500 yard men and helpers employed by 100 dealers. Local 553 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL) called it after negotiations had broken down on the union's demand for $1.20 an hour wages for drivers. Under the old contract with the Coal Merchants association and the Fuel Merchants association, drivers got $1 an hour. The contract expired Dec 31.

Alarmed by the prospect of coal shortages in the coldest weather of the winter, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia obtained from the union a promise that deliveries to hospitals, schools and other public institutions would not be interrupted.

The strike affects the city's four most populous boroughs, homes of almost 7,000,000 people.

Dealers said most homes, apartments and office buildings had enough coal on hand to take the immediate effect out of the strike.

Michael J. Cashal, vice president and spokesman for the union, said the wage increase would add only three cents a ton to the cost of handling coal, and that last week the dealers had raised the price to consumers 50 cents a ton.

Daniel M. Rugg, chairman of the employers' committee, said the wage increase demanded would raise labor costs 140 per cent, and that most of the dissatisfaction among the workers was because of the union's seniority system, which gave the older men most of the work.

Chief Inspector of Police, Louis F. Costuma, ordered all precinct commanders to make an immediate survey of fuel needs throughout the city, for use in an emergency.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Gitlow's Revelations In Book Show No Reason to Offer Him Forgiveness

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Ben Gitlow, the backslid Bolshevik who once had command of the Muscovite conspiracy against the United States, offers interesting testimony regarding the Communist youth movement in a book called "I Confess."

Mr. Gitlow may be remembered as the witness who told the Dies committee about the use of forged American passports by Communist leaders, the counterfeiting of American money by agencies of the Soviet government and the diversion or misappropriation for political purposes of money contributed by generous Americans for the relief of victims of the Russian famine.

* * *

As to whether the American Youth Congress has been dominated by the Communists, there is still conflict of belief. In moments of unguarded enthusiasm, prominent Communists have jubilantly claimed as much, but Mrs. Roosevelt insists taht she has satisfied herself by inquiry that this is not so.

It has not been denied, however, that the Young Communists tried to seize control or that they are influential in the movement, so Mr. Gitlow's remarks about the Communist Youth should interest the non-Communist youth of the country and their parents.

"They broke with their families," he writes of the American youth who were drawn into the Communist movement, "because the family was a bourgeois institution which stood in the way of their Communist activities. Many completely divorced themselves from their parents. It was not unusual for parents to plead with us that we induce their children to show them some kind of consideration."

Mr. Gitlow cites the case of a father who entered the national offices in Chicago and, placing an infant on the desk, told the party to take charge of the illegitimate child of his daughter, 16 years old, who had been seduced by one of the party leaders.

"Loose morals were general," he writes. "Party leaders changed their wives sometimes as often as one does an overcoat. The young Communists had but to see what their elders in the party were doing. It was no wonder that they defied all moral codes. If a young girl who joined the Communist youth organization insisted upon maintaining her chastity she was frowned upon as bourgeois by the self-styled revolutionists who had just emerged from knee breeches.

Many of the young Communists considered the giving up of one's chastity as a mark of distinction. Young Communists did not long remain single, but the common-law marriages between them, as a rule, were short-lived.

The orgies and debaucheries among the young were spoken about in whispers in the party, never seriously discussed and considered. We felt that the profligate sex relations among the youth were something we could not control and that as long as the youth could be depended upon to serve the interests of the movement it was best to leave the matter alone."

* * *

Max Eastman, who wrote an introduction of the book, says the work of the Communist party in the United States has involved a series of fanatical crimes not only against American law or Americanism but against the party's own principles and ideals.

He is one of those who apparently would grant social amnesty to backsliders who participated or acquiesced in abominable offenses against patriotism and decency.

* * *

He even bespeaks charity or understanding for Gitlow's opponents who, like Gitlow, were moved "in their factional maneuvers and their dirty trickery in general by superzealotry as well as by the mere thirst of power."

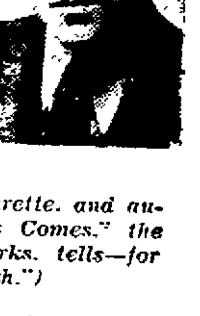
* * *

Not understanding Gitlow's present hostility to the party from the control of which he was arbitrarily removed by Josef Stalin, there may be Americans who will hesitate to forgive a man who felt that "profligate sex relations among the youth were something we could not control and that as long as the youth could be depended upon to serve the interests of the movement it was best to leave the matter alone."

He didn't voluntarily give up his command but was kicked out of the leadership of an organization—purporting to be an American political party—by a foreign despot, and only since then has he come to the point of deploring to a mild degree having "set them (American youth) the example of placing no moral limits about anything we found expedient to do."

It may be doubted that any man who once placed no moral limits on anything he found expedient to do is now telling the truth or ever can be believed on his word alone. He may by lying now to discredit those who defeated him. It is a known fact, however, that the Communists recognize no moral limits, so enormity is no challenge to belief.

Hollywood Speaks---



—By ROBBIN COONS

By DWIGHT TAYLOR

(The screen writer, son of the stage star Laurette, and author of "The Gay Divorcee," "When Tomorrow Comes," the screenplay of "F. O. B. Detroit" and other works, tells—for vacationing Robbin Coons—why he writes "trash.")

HOLLYWOOD—Every writer for films has had the experience of being cornered by some well-meaning man or woman and asked, with an air of engaging frankness, why he writes such trash.

"With all the wonderful things that have been written," they say, "why do you write such trash?

If you mention Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, Farewell to Arms, A Star Is Born, Goodbye Mr. Chips or any other outstanding film, it turns out that they haven't seen it. On further inquiry you discover that what they really mean is why don't you do Five Little Peppers Abroad or The Ordeal of Richard Carvel—in fact, any book that happens to have been their own particular favorite on first learning to read.

* * *

The answer to this question, although simple, is one that they seldom are able to understand. It involves the realities of cost and profit—a subject too sordid for art-lovers of this kind since time first began. They persist in confusing the production of motion pictures with the writing of books and plays, and even with the graphic arts. All these arts are contained in motion pictures but they find their outlet only through their acceptance by the People—people with a capital P, which as we all know is different from the Best People with a big B.

Pictures like everything else in this world have to be paid for and they are very expensive to make. The picture producer, unlike the book publisher and the art dealer, must of necessity aim at a very large audience, and even then he is gambling on getting back the sheer cost of his product. If he ever aims at that special, educated, articulate audience alone, he is doomed.

In fact, it is encouraging that the quality and standard of pictures can be held so high when its audience must be so vast. This art-loving, trash-hating minority always have an answer: Why not make pictures for a special audience and release them throughout the country in a chain of special houses. They want houses now! Houses where they can all sit together and see something really worthwhile. If the writer should attempt to go into the cost of operating a theater, they reach for their hats.

GIRL AT THE FRONT + + + + +

By ROB EDEN

(Copyright, 1940)

CHAPTER I

The girl at the head of the gangplank that bridged a strip of greasy water from the promenade deck to the dock was obviously an American.

The smart alertness of her face reflecting a quickness of mind, the freshness of her complexion, the trimness of her figure revealed her nationality as plainly as though she had worn an American flag in the lapel of her chic brown tailored suit.

She was grateful for the fact that she was a daughter of Uncle Sam. It meant a lot right now, with Europe locked in a bloody struggle, to be a citizen of a neutral country, free to sail away from the constant fear of crashing shells hurled from high-flying Nazi bombers.

She was grateful that a powerful government had arranged with the Companie Generale Transatlantique for one final trip across the Atlantic, daring the perils of lurking U-boats and sea raiders, to evacuate the last Americans remaining in France who wanted to go home.

It was reassuring to know that just outside the harbor a squadron of sleek grey American destroyers rode the swells, waiting for the St. Croix, and that they would form a cordon about the huge liner to give safe convoy within shouting distance of Pier 57 in New York.

"Hello, Broadway, good-bye France," she hummed, reversing the phrase of George Cohen's rousing ballad of the previous World war.

Claire Dutton had a right to be happy, to sing.

She was going home to peace and safety after weeks of nerve-tearing waiting for air-raid alarms, of seeing gay young men clad in horizon blue, marching off to the front to face the might of Hitler's hordes and to find, perhaps, death at the end of the road.

Better still, she was going home on the same boat with her boss—Bill Cameron. A warming, pleasant feeling came over her as she thought of him—dear Bill. Not that she ever had addressed him in that fashion during the months she had been employed as his confidential secretary. Indeed not. Their relations were as strictly conventional as they should be between employer and employe. He always was Mr. Cameron to her, and if he ever thought of her as any one but Miss Dutton, she didn't know it. But there was no law against cherishing dreams, dreams she jealously guarded. There was nothing to prevent her thinking of him as dear Bill in her innermost thoughts, and mentally embracing the image of the man who, at the age of thirty-five, was one of the most important men in Washington.

His was work of a highly confidential nature; he served as a diplomatic liaison officer under the direct orders of the president. Officially, he had no standing. It had to be that way, but it was Cameron and several others like him who really were the brains of American diplomacy abroad. They were the ones who had secret meetings with the chancellors and premiers—gaining an advantage here, yielding a point there, until finally when it came time for the ambassadors to get together for drawing up formal agreements, all the preliminaries and undercover maneuverings had been taken care of.

To look at Cameron, you never would have suspected him of being what he was—a brilliant internationalist, a superdiplomat. In appearance, he was typical of New England at its cultural best, with a soft slurring accent which stamped him as clearly as a printed label with the Back Bay district of Boston.

* * *

Tall, rather slender, he had none of the appearance of an athlete, but Claire knew that he had been a letter man at Harvard. She had happened upon an old photograph of him in a track suit in a college year book she found in his library one day.

His hairline was receding a trifle, accentuating his ascetic, intellectual appearance to which his rather sharp nose and deep-set grey-blue eyes, also contributed. Claire especially liked his mouth, which more often than not was twisted into an ingratiating grin, a disarming grin which often masked the seriousness of his purposes.

That those high in power appreciated his unusual qualities, the girl knew well, and the patronizing manner some of the lesser functionaries with high sounding titles adopted toward him, because officially they outranked him, amused her greatly.

If they knew, as she did, how often he was called in for quiet conferences with men whom the snobbish functionaries held in the greatest awe, they very soon would mend their manners. But that was part of Cameron's value — the almost complete anonymity of his services.

He spoke French, Italian and German with a trace of his Back Bay accent which was so firmly ingrained he never would entirely eliminate it. She knew he was proficient in the languages, because she was, too. That is, she spoke and read French and German like a native and knew enough Italian to recognize that Bill Cameron was a master of that tongue also. That was how she had happened to get her job with him. She had specialized in languages in college, and when the death of her widowed mother had left her alone in her senior year, she made use of her training and gifts to get a position in the consular service.

* * *

It was while she was completing an intensive course of training at Washington that Cameron suddenly sent for her. He questioned her searchingly in French and German, and she replied in the languages he used. He went into her background—her family, her friends—and finally offered her the position she now held as his confidential secretary. She had been afraid that it might be impossible to transfer from the consular service after so much time and effort had been spent training her, and mentioned her fears. Cameron had merely grinned, and said he thought it might be arranged.

The following day, an executive order made her transfer official and she knew that any one who could so easily cut official red tape must wield a powerful influence.

Claire was young—but not too young. Twenty-four, she had written on the questionnaire she filled out when she entered the consular service. She was not too tall, nor on the other hand too short either—about five feet four.

A breeze with a tang of sharpness was blowing as she stood looking down on the deck, searching the crowd for a sight of her employer, and she was glad that her heavy coat was with her bags in the small stateroom she had been fortunate to get, even though it was shared with two other women and a child. November would probably be pretty cold on the North Atlantic.

She tucked a vagrant lock of her curly brown hair back under her small brown sailor hat as she glanced at the watch on her wrist.

"I wonder where he is?" she asked herself. "It's getting late."

* * *

There was increasing activity on the dock. Porters were scurrying up the gangplank laden with bags of late arrivals, and a small crane creaked as it swung a huge cradle of interlaced rope piled high with trunks. All other loading had long since been completed. The St. Croix was about ready to put to sea.

A line of soldiers stood at ease beyond the gangplank. Claire noted their camouflaged helmets strapped to the packs on their backs, and the gas masks which swung from straps about their necks. Her own mask, which Cameron had bought for her, was at the Paris hotel where they had lived. She had left it when she took a taxi to catch the boat train, with instructions for the manager to turn it over to some one who might not be able to afford such a good one. It had cost five dollars, and was guaranteed to be effective against all types of gas fumes. Some, she knew, that sold for lesser prices, guaranteed the wearer against only mustard and tear gas. If the enemy should drop chlorine or something equally lethal, the cheaper masks would be useless.

Again, Claire glanced nervously at her watch. Fifteen minutes! Not a sign of Cameron yet, and no word from him. Wild visions of what might have happened to him arose to confront her. The plane, in which an army officer was to fly him to La Havre, might have crashed! Why hadn't he taken the train?

* * *

She knew the answer to that question before she asked it of herself. Cameron had explained as she was leaving, when he handed her both their tickets. A last minute conference, which might take as long as an hour, had been called. He must attend. The French government had put a fast plane at his disposal so that he would reach the boat almost as soon as she.

"All shore—all visitors ashore!" a boy in a brass-buttoned red coat and smartly creased blue trousers called as he rang a musical chime. It was almost a useless admonition, as no one was aboard who wasn't sailing. The porters were not permitted to come any further than the boat end of the gangplank where they turned their baggage burdens over to stewards. This was wartime, and every one who came aboard was closely scrutinized and his baggage opened and examined before it was carried onto the ship. France was taking no chance of treachery. It had no desire to lose this tremendous ship built at a cost of nearly $50,000,000 through any lack of vigilance.

Claire's bags had not been opened, but they were the only ones not opened on all that vast ship. Hers bore diplomatic seals, affixed in Paris. She need not open them on the dock in New York either, unless she wished. Cameron had arranged this convenience as they expected to leave for Washington immediately on docking. An Army plane would be waiting at Governor's Island, to whisk them to Anacosta an hour after they had set foot on American soil.

* * *

Aside from the dock hands, standing ready to cast off the huge hawsers, the strip adjoining the ship was now vacant. The soldiers had withdrawn to the gate, the only entrance to the dock, and were standing in a group there. Sailors were beginning to unlash the moorings of the gangplank, ready for the signal from the bridge to push it ashore.

Claire was almost frantic as she glanced once more toward the shed through which Cameron would come hurrying if he were to catch the boat. She appealed to the ship officer standing at the head of the gangplank.

"Can't you delay a few minutes?" she pleaded. "Mr. Cameron should be here at any moment."

"I'm sorry, Mademoiselle," the officer replied, with a salute. "We must sail on the dot. Our convoy just radioed that it is waiting. We can't delay for any one."

"But. . . ."

"I'm very sorry," the officer interrupted, and snapped out a sharp order to the deckhands to get ready to put off the gangplank.

"Wait!" Claire cried. "Wait for me!" She turned and ran down the deck, and dashed down a flight of stairs to the deck below. In the corridor she met a steward and, shouting at him in French to follow, ran on to her stateroom.

"My bags!" she ordered as the astounded steward followed her inside. "Put them ashore, please!"

"But, Mademoiselle!" he protested. "It is impossible! We are sailing in one minutes!"

"That's why I have to get ashore! Quickly! Take my bags! Those on the bed!"

With an expression on his face which clearly indicated that he thought the "mademoiselle" was crazy, the steward grabbed the bags and all but ran after Claire as she hurried back to the gangplank.

"Has Mr. Cameron come aboard while I was gone?" she demanded of the officer.

"No, Mademoiselle. No, I have not seen him."

"Then I'm going ashore. I can't sail without him."

"But. . . ."

"I've made up my mind. Please have the steward put my bags on the dock."

* * *

With a shrug, the officer nodded permission to the steward to go ashore, and Claire, with one last longing look at the big comfortable deck, walked quickly down to the dock. She fished a ten-franc note from her purse and handed it to the steward, who clutched it eagerly and scrambled back aboard just as a crane overhead creaked and the gangplank swung away from the boat and settled slowly onto the cement floor of the pier.

The girl heard two sharp whistle blasts, and turning, saw the dockhands casting off the mooring lines. Tugs belched smoke from their stubby stacks and cables tightened as they bent to the task of towing the huge liner away from the shore. Slowly, the St. Croix moved away, the strip of water between it and the dock gradually widening. Passengers, lining the decks, waved frantically to those on shore, shouting good-byes in English and French.

Tears were in Claire's eyes as she stood waving her handkerchief until the big boat, painted a muddy gray for camouflage purposes, melted into the horizon. She had counted so much on going home—on getting out of this country, torn by war, and here she was still in it. She was a fool! Cameron would say so when she saw him! She should have sailed! He would get home some way, perhaps on one of the Clippers which were still flying the Atlantic as far as Lisbon.

But regardless of what Cameron would say—regardless of who might call her a fool, Claire knew in her heart she could do nothing else. She could not go home without knowing what had happened to Cameron. That he was safe.

* * *

She called a porter to carry her bags, and started into the great shed which covered the dock. She'd go back to the railway station. She could phone from there. A cab wheeled up at her signal, and the porter started loading in the bags.

"Why, there's some mistake!" she exclaimed. "I have only four bags, and there are five here."

"That's what the steward brought ashore, Mademoiselle," the porter said. "I was watching him. All are marked the same—your initials, the seals. They must all be yours."

Claire insisted there was some mistake, but had to admit that the bags matched. Except now there were two overnight cases instead of one. Both were equally worn. Both had the same seals. She couldn't tell them apart; they seemed identical.

Rather than argue with the porter, she had him put them all into the cab and drove to the station. There, she phoned the hotel where she and Cameron had stayed in Paris.

No. Cameron was not there. He had checked out, and left for Le Havre to catch the St. Criox. No, they had heard nothing from him since he left.

She turned from the phone. There was nothing to do but return to Paris. Somehow, Cameron had been delayed. He wasn't on the St. Croix. He hadn't appeared at Le Havre. He must be in Paris. She walked to the window and bought a first-class ticket. Fortunately, a train was leaving in five minutes. She should be back before dark.

In her compartment, she sat staring at the bags ranged on the seat across from her. She was alone, and suddenly she decided to solve the mystery. She opened one of the overnight bags. It was hers, all right. Her night things and toilet articles were there, just as she had carefully packed them this morning before she left the hotel.

Curiously, she unsnapped the catch on the identical bag and opened it up.

This was peculiar! It contained nothing but a cardboard carton which completely filled the inside of the case! What could it be?

She heard some one in the corridor outside, and quickly closed the bag. An army officer, carrying a small kit bag, entered and bowed.

"Do you mind, Mademoiselle, if I sit in here?" he asked, politely. "The other compartments seem quite filled."

"Certainly you may," Claire answered with a smile. "I haven't the whole compartment reserved."

* * *

Expressing profuse thanks as though she had conferred a great favor, the officer seated himself by the door, and having disposed of his kit bag, promptly pulled a small book from his pocket and started to read.

He was an elderly man with a heavy white mustache and a small goatee. His cheeks were ruddy from much time spent in the open, and Claire decided that he probably was a retired officer who had been called from the comfort of his small country estate, back to the colors of the country he had served for many years. She wasn't certain of his rank because she never had mastered the mystery of French uniforms, but from the amound of gold braid on his sleeves and cap, she guessed he couldn't possibly be anything less than a colonel. Perhaps a general.

The officer showed no signs of being congenial, and was soon nodding over his book. Claire turned toward the window and as the beautiful countryside, brilliant in the colors of autumn, rushed by, puzzled over the extra bag and tried to think what Cameron would do in such a circumstance.

"There's something funny about it," she said to herself. "Some one is trying to put something over on me."

She decided that Cameron, in her place, would immediately take the case to some one who would solve the mystery and that's what she determined to do as soon as she reached Paris.

Consequently, when the train slid to a stop at the Gare St. Lazare, and a porter carried her baggage to the taxi stand, she directed her driver to take her to the American Embassy.

It was after five o'clock, but she was fortunate in finding Welles Sanford, an attache she had met several times through her employer, and told him of her experience after she had first made inquiries about Cameron. He knew nothing of what might have happened to Cameron, but promised to investigate.

* * *

He inspected the bag containing the carton, whistled softly and telephoned the Surete Generale. He briefly described what had happened and while they waited for a man from the secret service, he called the Ministry of War. He had difficulty finding the man he wanted because of the lateness of the hour, but finally got a minor official on the wire.

"No, Monsieur Sanford," the man said. "I do not know what has become of Monsieur Cameron. But I shall make inquiries. I know nothing of his plans, so I shall have to make several phone calls. I shall call you later."

Pierre Bornet of the Surete didn't look the least like a master detective, Claire thought as he bowed deeply when Sanford introduced him to her. He was very short, scarcely five feet, and was quite rotund. In fact, she wondered if he didn't measure almost as much around as he did up and down.

His head was almost completely bald, but as if to make up for this deficiency, nature had endowed him a luxurious mustache which easily extended three inches on either side of his nose, with a slight upward tilt at the ends which, with his small, sharp bright-blue eyes, gave him the general facial appearance of a fox.

If M. Bornet was funny to look at, he was anything but that in his professional capacity. He was efficiency itself as he snapped out questions with the rapidity of a machine gun.

* * *

He wanted to know just when she discovered the case. If she had seen it on the boat. Who had carried it off. Who had placed it in the taxi. A description of the steward and the porter, and the taxi driver, too. He asked about the diplomatic labels. Nodded sagely as she explained why Cameron had them affixed to her bags as well as his.

Finally, he got around to the case itself. He carefully compared the odd case with the one Claire knew positively to be hers. Point by point, he went over them, nodding to himself as he saw how cleverly the second bag had been made to look like her own.

With a flourish which would have done credit to a master showman, he at last opened the bag. He carefully removed the carton. He smelled it. Shook it gently, and at last took a penknife from his pocket and slit the cover.

OVER in Bellevue, where Vern Hoffman left a crack basketball combine for his successor, they're already talking about what their boys are going to do with the Tygers when they come to their city next week.

They're saying that this season's Bellevue club is stronger than the one which forced the Tygers to stage a sensational last-minute comeback to win the district crown last spring.

With the present Bellevue edition stacking up stronger and the Tyger team somewhat weaker than the 1938-39 combination which included Tom Scott, Jack Lyons, Jack Dugger and Dave Shelley, the northwestern Ohio rooters shudder to think what will happen to Mansfield a week from Friday.

Comparing the scores against common foes, Bellevue does appear stronger than Mansfield. However, score comparisons aren't foolproof as the Tygers proved last season when they reversed a regular season defeat to win the district crown.

Mansfield and Bellevue have met both Sandusky and Hamilton. Bellevue handed the Blue Streaks a more decisive defeat than did the Tygers and it won over Hamilton, which turned back the Tygers.

While everything points to a Bellevue victory next week, the Tygers may have more in reserve than the hosts now believe. At least we're certain that Hoffman is not taking his Tygers to Bellevue next week with the purpose of losing to his former charges.

Right now it looks like this will be one of the games that all of the Tyger followers will want to see.

Careers of Clark, 'Tiny' Similar.

THE careers of Clark Shaughnessy and "Tiny" Thornhill, the man he succeeds as head coach at Stanford, are strangely parallel. Both coached for schools of high scholastic rating that bend over backward to prevent over-emphasizing football, and both had disastrous seasons in 1939. Both succeeded "grand old men" of football, Shaughnessy following A. And, remarkably enough, both of the "old men" have gone on to new successes, Stagg making the college of Pacific the "Giant Killers" of the west and Warner coaching San Jose State to an unbeaten season last year.

Hits Illegal Practices In New Warning

Landis Holds Minor Leaguers Should Be 'Free to Advance Rapidly.'

CHICAGO—(AP)—Spry, old Kenesaw Mountain Landis still is making spectacular rulings, just as he did 35 years ago when he sat on the federal bench.

* * *

Back in 1907 he slapped a breath-taking $29,240,000 fine on the Standard Oil company of Indiana and this week he shook the baseball world with a ruling that cost Detroit's American League club an estimated half-million dollars.

* * *

The 71-year-old baseball commissioner made himself the ball player's friend more than ever when he cut loose 91 players owned by Detroit and affiliated minor league clubs Sunday.

He warned club owners and executives that infractions of the rules governing player transactions in the future would lead to heavy fines and banishment from the game of officials responsible.

Landis explained in a supplementary statement yesterday that illegal practices in operations of farms hurt the players.

"The purpose and effect of the farm system," he asserted "is to cold storage ball players until the major club controlling them sees fit to use them or sell their contracts.

* * *

"Instead of being free to advance as rapidly as their ability merits, and to advance to and through any and every club in baseball, players are unjustly restricted to 'grooved' advancement through the one system which controls them and solely as that system may conceive to be in its interests."

Jack Shiplet Scores Winning Bucket Against Plucky Whippets In Bordertown.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

BREAKING the strings with a one-handed shot as he raced into the bucket closely pursued by two goal defenders, Sophomore Jack Shiplet gave the Mansfield high hoopsters their margin of victory in a "suicide" overtime period on the Shelby planks last night.

Young Shiplet cinched the decision just exactly 45 seconds after the center jump in the extra period to give the Tygers a 28 to 26 triumph in a rough-and-tumble tussle typical of the Mansfield-Shelby rivalry.

Although the Whippets never led once during the heated battle, Coach Bill Query's plucky crew of underrated cagers staged a magnificent comeback to knot the count 26-all on diminutive Bill Daugherty's field goal from the corner in the final minute.

* * *

Much smaller than the Tygers, the Whippets came about as close to upsetting the home town lads as the law allows. Shelby received the tip in the overtime and immediately drove goalward, Daugherty taking the first crack at the netting from the corner from which he tied the score.

* * *

The ball struck the iron, rolled onto the rim and spilled right out again. But Shelby's threat was not killed. The Whippets got the rebound, tossed the leather out to deadly-orbed Bob Lehman back of the "keyhole." Lehman shot, but he was wide of the hoop.

Shiplet

Don Rose pulled down the rebound, tossed to Shiplet on the right side of the court and the little sophomore, noticing an opening, broke into a dribble and outraced his guards to the basket, and SWISH!—his throw flopped through the opening without touching the rim to climax one of the most spectacular games of the two schools' series.

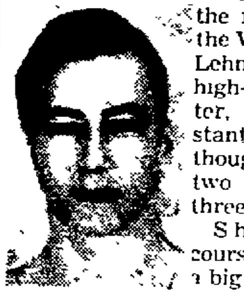
Mansfield held a 22 to 17 advantage going into the fourth period, but the hosts gradually narrowed the margin, and Daugherty supplied a pair of free throws and the basket that enabled the Whippets to crawl up on even terms with the Tygers just before the gun sounded.

Gene Miller's hook shot gave the Tygers their only basket in the final frame when they were outscored nine points to four.

The Tygers held the edge at the end of each quarter, but the score was tied four times during the melee, once in the first period, twice in the second and again in the fourth.

Miller gave the Tygers a 6 to 4 lead in the opening stanza and he and Shiplet were instrumental in staking Coach Vern Hoffman's men to a 14 to 9 edge at the intermission.

It was a racing game from start to finish, and while the Tygers probably didn't turn in their best performance of the season, Shelby cannot be denied any credit as it played superbly against the heavily-favored Mansfield quint.



Daugherty

Daugherty was the real hero for the Whippets, but Lehman, Shelby's high-scoring center, was a constant threat, although limited to two baskets and three fouls.

Shiplet, of course, deserves a big hand for his contribution to the win, but Miller led the scoring with six fielders. Russ Beer left the ball game in the third period on four personals called within a few minutes in the frame.

Shiplet started in place of Gene Rudolph and the only other change in the Tyger lineup found Dick Burkholder, who turned in a neat performance in his first starting assignment, at Herpich's post.

* * *

Mansfield outscored the Whippets from the field, 14 to 8, but converted only one out of 19 free throws. Ten conversions out of 14 attempts at the charity line aided Shelby materially.

* * *

The junior Tygers, led by Hager and Romano, who tallied nine and eight points, respectively, defeated the Shelby subs, 38 to 17, in the preliminary, the winners holding a 17 to 8 advantage at the half.

1927 Yankees Stronger Than Present Champs, Says Umpire Pipgras.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—(AP)—The 1937 New York Yankees, in the opinion of Umpire George Pipgras who was one of them, were a better all around team than the 1939 world champions.

Furthermore, he said today he believed only two of the 1939 team could have displayed any of the 1927 regulars. They are Joe Dimaggio and Bill Dickey. Pipgras' hurling career ended in 1931 when he broke the elbow of his pitching arm.

Wesleyan Five Halts Cat's Star

Baumholtz Held Scoreless From Field for First Time As Ohio Loses.

(By Associated Press)

MUSKINGUM tightened its grip on first place in the Ohio conference at Toledo and Miami took over the state-wide lead on last night's 13-game Buckeye basketball program.

Toledo, with 14 victories against two defeats, and Miami, with 7 and 1, were idle, but advanced into a percentage tie as Ohio university, the previous leader, dropped its second decision in 11 starts. Ohio Wesleyan upset the Bobcats at Athens, 40 to 35.

* * *

The Muskies posted their sixth consecutive league triumph, a 60 to 46 victory over Kent State.

* * *

Frank Baumholz, Bobcat forward who tallied 181 points in the 10 previous contests, was held scoreless from the field by the crack Bishop defense. He made five points on free throws, his lowest total in two years of collegiate play.

Don Everett, Muskingum guard, counted 14 points, and Wayne Griffith, Kent forward, 16 in the tussle at New Concord. The Muskies were on top, 30 to 22, at intermission.

In other conference games Wooster tripped Otterbein, 52 to 39; Capital stopped Kenyon, 58 to 48; Wittenberg turned back Findlay, 40 to 29; Denison edged Mt. Union, 41 to 38, and Ashland downed Heidelberg, 52 to 41.

Independent results included Bowling Green's 61 to 38 triumph over DeSales, Hiram's 50 to 31 margin over Thiel of Pennsylvania, Dayton's 44 to 29 victory over Xavier, Rio Grande's 34 to 28 defeat at the hands of Alfred Holbrook, Ohio College of Chiropody's setback from Alliance college of Pennsylvania, 34 to 30, and a 43 to 40 edge for Tri-State of Indiana over Defiance.

Cliff Heskett, Wittenberg forward, dropped in six goals and a free throw as the Lutherans won their third victory in four conference starts.

Heidelberg's setback was its sixth straight. Ashland, topped by Forward Bob Sprague with 18 points, led at intermission, 27 to 22.

* * *

Denison overcame Mt. Union's 23 to 17 half-time margin in their game at Granville. A field goal by O. Jones, sophomore forward, and a foul toss by Del Johnson, Steubenville center, clinched the victory.

* * *

Center Paul Weaver and Forward Dale Helmich flipped in two goals each for Capital early in the second half to break a tie at 31. Jack Berno, Kenyon pivot man, topped the scorers with 17 points.

Wooster's victory over Otterbein was its 24th consecutive league triumph, including three this season. The Scots were on top at the half, 26 to 20.

The Augustine basketeers will tangle with the fourth-place Isaly Dairy club in the middle game. The Red Billiards, who hold down third place, meet the Moose dribblers in the finale.

Stuhldreher, In Huddle, Says 'No' To Grid Huddle Question

By HENRY McLEMORE

LOS ANGELES—(UP)—Hearing that Harry Stuhldreher was in town, and remembering that he was one of the "four horsemen," I naturally went out to the Santa Anita track to look for him.

I found him, in a huddle, and what do you suppose he was talking about in the huddle? He was talking about how much football would benefit, both as something to play and something to watch, if the huddle were abolished.

* * *

Stuhldreher, whose record at Notre Dame in the early twenties established him as one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time, and who now coaches at Wisconsin, believes the huddle has no more place in the modern game than the flying wedge and tackles with moustaches and chrysanthemum haircuts.

* * *

"Coaches who argue for the huddle system of calling signals will tell you that the huddle simplifies matters, and that eliminates any interference by the roar of the crowd," Stuhldreher says. "But that isn't true. As a matter of fact, the huddle complicates matters, offering, as it does, the opportunity for all elevens to suggest the proper play. As for the crowd drowning out the quarterbacks voice, well, I've played before big and noisy crowds and never once was bothered in any way."

Stuhldreher is convinced that the tremendous improvement in defensive football play in the past ten years will force coaches to return to the barking of signals by the quarterback.

"Teams use five, six, seven and eight defensive formations in a single game these days," the old horseman said, "and this makes it imperative that the quarterback stand up and call the signals. In that way he can see the various changes in the defensive set-up and capitalize on them. With the huddle a play is chosen and then the team comes out and finds that the defensive set-up is such that it makes the play decided on useless. The proof of this lies in the fact that huddle teams return to formation and call another play seventy-five per cent of the time."

* * *

Stuhldreher, who refuses to admit that he is biased on the subject just because he was stand-up signal caller at Notre Dame, says the football public would be pleased by the elimination of the huddle.

* * *

"The huddle takes up too much time and makes the game a great deal slower," he argues. "Too, direct signal calling would make for better quarterbacks. When a boy knows his responsibility of calling the corect play is solely his, he will concentrate more on becoming a master of tactics. With the huddle much of the responsibility is taken away from the quarterback. He is not too much a leader as chairman of a round table discussion."

The horses came into the stretch at this time and the huddle against the huddle broke up.

Old Cage Rivals Get Together On Tyger Court Thursday Night

YOU will probably not see anything like the New York Renaissance cagers presented last week, but Thursday night's City Class A league games should provide some "hot" action for cagegoers.

* * *

The Yuncker Sports and Westinghouse Electrics, who tangle in the first game at 7:30 p. m., have been deadly rivals for several years, and their rivalry has not cooled.

* * *

Coach Hank Richards' Westies have many reasons for wanting to topple the Sports this week. The chief reason is that they have yet to win their first league game.

This will probably be a difficult job Thursday night as the Sports will be at their full strength again. Coach Jimmy Breres revealed today that Johnny Rees, who has not seen action in the Sports' last two games because of illness, will return to the lineup.

With Rees and Al Stickler working together, the Yuncker team presents one of the toughest scoring combinations in the circuit.

The Blue Goose Sohioans and Shelley's Chocolates tangle in the second game, and these two ambitious clubs should make the fur fly. The Shelley team has the fastest team in the league and the Sohioans are not far behind.

* * *

They are expected to stage a scoring duel that will be packed with thrills as both teams operate on the theory that offense rather than defense wins basketball games.

Frank Pytlak Not for Sale

Catcher to Get Contract, Kohlbecker Says.

CLEVELAND—(INS)— Business Manager Frank Kohlbecker of the Cleveland Indians today corrected the impression gained in some circles that Catcher Frankie Pytlak was up for sale because he had not received his 1940 contract.

* * *

The last batch of contracts was mailed yesterday, Kohlbecker explained, although he would not say whether Pytlak's was among them.

* * *

Signing of Roy Weatherly, peppery outfielder, and Louis Kahn, rookie catcher, today assured the Indians of a complete team, whether or not anyone else decides to play for the proffered salary figures.

The Indians' other star catcher, Rollie Hemsley, and Pitcher Johnny Allen, two of the club's mainstays, have not been heard from since receiving contracts.

Other high scores in the league were produced by Jimmy Weems of Curing No. 2, 595; John Martin of Factory Office, 592, and Schultz of Foremen, 590. Weems opened with a 233.

J. Harrod blasted out a 635 to annex individual honors in the Mixed Doubles league. He scored games of 222, 204 and 209. Florence Handwork and Catherine Cheney set the feminine pace with identical totals of 522.

* * *

The best duo series was registered by Sophia Meder and her partner, Gump, who came through with 1027. Gump rolled a 528. The partners rolled identical scores of 214 in the middle game.

Walter Fensch hit 600 right on the nose as the Westinghouse No. 1 team lost to the Westinghouse Travelers, 2282 to 2253, in a special match.

The O. P. S. league was paced by Worman, who came through with 534, and the Meter Service club, which smacked out 2232.

Badger Paces Big Ten Scorers

CHICAGO—(AP)—There's never a dull moment in the free-for-all battle for individual scoring honors in the Big Ten cage race, a new pace-setter, Wisconsin's Gene Englund, bouncing into the spotlight this week.

Englund, veteran center, came from nowhere to first place with a flurry of baskets in two week-end games. He was not even listed among the first 12 scorers a week ago, but 35 points in his last two games—19 of them against Indiana Monday—boosted him into the top spot with a total of 51 points, 20 field goals and 11 free throws.

DAVID SAYS JENNY CAN EASILY HAVE HER MARRIAGE ANNULLED CONSIDERING WHO AND WHAT CRAIG IS! I'M SO GLAD!— THEY'RE STILL TRAILING CRAIG — HE'S ALREADY GIVEN THEM SEVERAL "BIG" LEADS!
THAT MAN WHO MET CRAIG AT THE GRAND CENTRAL — THEY SHADOWED HIM, GOT THE GOODS ON HIM, RIGHT! ONE OF THE TOPS IN THIS SPY RING! — DAVID'S WORK MUST BE THRILLING — BUT SO DANGEROUS, TOO — BLESS HIS HEART, — — — — — WANTING TO GIVE ME CREDIT FOR HELPING — JUST 'CAUSE I SAW JENNY — TOOK HER HOME WITH ME!
HE'S A WONDERFUL COMBINATION — SO BRAVE — AND YET SO KIND AND GENTLE, TOO!
AND NOW FOR A "LOOK-IN" ON DAVID'S THOUGHTS!
PRECIOUS PAM! SHE GROWS SWEETER EVERY DAY! SO UNSELFISH, SO THOUGHTFUL OF OTHERS! — NO MAN IS GOOD ENOUGH FOR HER! I KNOW I'M NOT!
TENDER THOUGHTS FOR A STERN (?) G-MAN, ARE THEY NOT?

WHY THE DISGUISE, JUDGE? — ARE YOU TRYING TO DODGE A PROCESS-SERVER? — — OR ARE YOU GOING TO A MASQUERADE AS A SEALYHAM? —
YOU SURE FOOLED ME UNTIL YOU HICCOUGHED! — — YOU LOOK LIKE YOU JUST CAME FROM LAYING A CORNER-STONE!
HIST, LADS, IF A MAN NAMED "PENNYFLIP" CALLS TO SEE ME ABOUT PIRATE BURIED TREASURE, TELL HIM I'VE GONE TO CHILE! — — REFER TO ME IN FRONT OF HIM AS "DOCTOR SWALF"!
YOU WON'T SEE HIM AGAIN, JUDGE

Shares Showing Advances in Minority, With Peabody Pacing Gainers.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Minor patrol actions formed the stock market's work today.

After a quiet opening the tape trailed with here and there a favored share pushed up around a point—but few of these.

Cluett Peabody was fairly active after touching a new high for the year. American Telephone was another to move ahead.

Other gainers, mostly in the fractional class, included Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Allied Chemical, Chespeake & Ohio and Loft. Hesitant were Woolworth, du Pont and Kennecott.

* * *

The narrow nature o the market and its lethargy appeared to result almost wholly from lack of interest. A favorable development was a statement retail automobile sales for the first ten days of the month were 26.6 per cent above those for last year.

* * *

Wall streeters noted the growth of "war" business in the report of the Department of Commerce that December exports o $358,000,000 were the largest for any month in nearly ten years.

Airplane, petroleum, metal and cotton shipments contributed heavily to the total. Cotton deliveries for abroad amounted to $43,000,000 in the final month of the year against $30,288,000 in November.

Sherwood Seeks 'Showdown' on Athens Relief Crisis

CALLS COUNTY OFFICIALS TO STATE PARLEY

Director Demands Reason for Failure to Comply With Changes in Set-up.

BULLETIN

ATHENS, O.—(AP)—Three Athens county officials were indicted today for soliciting and accepting bribes in county purchases of limestone and road equipment. They were Commissioners Ira Whitmore and Walter MacCombs and Engineer B. F. Beckler, jr. Whitmore was named in six counts and Beckler eight.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood summoned Athens county officials today to appear at a hearing in Columbus Thursday on the county's relief situation.

Sherwood said the hearing was called under that section of the state relief law which gives the welfare director power to compel local officials "to show cause" why certain administrative procedures should not be changed.

The welfare director said he had asked county commissioners, the relief director, county auditor, treasurer and prosecuting attorney to appear at the meeting.

He declined to say what his recommendations would be, but explained they would be based upon reports submitted by an investigator who studied the administrative system in the county and by auditors who checked the county's financial resources.

Sherwood also said the date for re-registration of Athens county relief clients would be set after the hearing. He said an open hearing was acceptable to him and that he would suggest it to the local officials, but that he did not know whether they would agree.

The welfare director also referred to a section of the law which gives him power to issue orders on local relief agents for changes in administration if a hearing substantiates the findings.

He said William Hartsough, who is resigning as Columbus relief director, would head the poor relief division of the welfare department after tomorrow.

JUDGE SPEAKS

Anderson on Program of Probate Association in Columbus.

Judge C. J. Anderson, in Columbus attending the annual convention of the Association of Probate Judges of Ohio, was to be one of the speakers at the concluding session today.

Others on this afternoon's program were Judges William C. Wiseman, Dayton; Charles E. Chittenden, Toledo; M. G. Fenton, Chillicothe; Frank Flemming and D. F. May, Akron.

Judge John H. Lamenck, New Philadelphia, president of the Juvenile Judges association, will be toastmaster at a banquet tonight. Sessions of the juvenile judges, most of whom also are probate judges, will begin tomorrow.

Closer supervision in final administration of estates as a means of increasing inheritance tax revenues was advocated to judges today by D. K. Larrimer, inheritance tax attorney for the state tax commission.

State Retracts Order to Build Mt. Gilead Pool

MT. GILEAD—The state conservation will not put a swimming pool in at the state lakes here as originally planned, according to word received here from W. R. Wheelock of the inland lakes division.

When Wheelock and other conservation department presented the proposal for a swimming pool at the lakes here a few weeks ago they found to their surprise that practically everyone at the gathering was against the proposal.

Objection was based on the fact that for several years unsuccessful efforts were made to have such a pool installed and when no action was taken, [illegible] municipal pool was built in Mt. Gilead.

It was pointed [illegible] at a meeting that the state [illegible] if built, would [illegible] competition with the municipal pool. Taking these facts into consideration the conservation department decided [illegible]

OHIO DEMS TO BACK 3RD TERM

Pivotal State's Delegates to Be Pledged to Roosevelt and Then Donahey.

New Deal," Limbach said, thus virtually assuring Ohio backing for any presidential successor designated by Mr. Roosevelt.

Control of the delegation will be kept by Donahey until the organization is ready to cast its unit vote, Limbach added. However, neither Ohio law nor custom require delegates to support on the convention floor the candidate to whom they are pledged.

Limbach Leads Group.

Limbach plans to head as chairman the 16 delegates-at-large, each with a half vote, and 44 district delegates, who will have a full vote each. They will be elected in the May 14 primary.

Chief Democrat omitted from a tentative list of at-large delegates was former Gov. Martin L. Davey. Frequently at odds with the Roosevelt administration during his 1935-38 term, Davey, it was understood, failed to get the approval of Senator Donahey.

Written sanction must be given in Ohio for delegates' candidacies, this being one of the reasons for the "favorite son" method of backing presidential aspirants.

Ohio Republicans are expected to announce their convention plans soon. They are agreed to support a "favorite son," U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, who also has been making a coast-to-coast campaign for convention support.

Davey, who lost control of the state Democratic organization when he was defeated by Charles Sawyer for the gubernatorial nomination in 1938, declined comment on the party convention program. He said at his home in Kent he may have a statement later.

At least two of his supporters, Francis W. Poulson, former state chairman, and John E. Nolan, Jefferson county chairman, are expected to gain delegate positions.

National Committeeman Sawyer plans to be a district delegate.

Almost certain to be on the delegate-at-large list are: Donahey's son-in-law, James W. Huffman of Columbus; Mrs. Mildred R. Jaster of Cleveland, national committeewoman; Robert J. Bulkley of Cleveland, former U. S. senator; George White of Marietta, former governor; Mrs. Sarah Krusling of Cincinnati; Miss Mary Taylor of Lisbon; Earl H. Hanefeld of Ottawa, state central committee chairman; and James A. Reynolds of Cleveland.

Former Gov. James M. Cox of Dayton, the party's presidential candidate 20 years ago, has been invited to be a candidate for delegate-at-large. He has declined similar invitations previously.

Others on the tentative list include Joseph Hostettler of Cleveland and Dennis F. Dunlavey of Ashtabula.

O. K. REFUSED ON WPA PROGRAM

Officials Told City's Plans for $144,000 in Projects Must Be Revised.

The WPA work relief program of $144,000, which city officials presented to WPA authorities in Columbus yesterday, was returned to city engineers to be rewritten today.

The program was taken to Columbus by Mayor W. J. Locke, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton, C. N. Shultz, chairman of council's water committee, and a city engineer.

Crafton said they went over the plans, which involve extensive sewer and water line projects throughout the city and call for an expenditure of $144,000, of which the city will pay $60,000 when and if the plans are approved.

The program was rejected because of several irregularities which conflict with WPA rules, Crafton said. One of these was that the program, in its present form, calls for a sewer line to run past an addition off Marion avenue where lots have not yet been sold. WPA regulations stipulate that none of its funds may be used where they will add to the value of additions and vacant lots as the funds are intended to benefit the community in general and not individuals.

BARES 'SECRET ORDERS' GIVEN NLRB EXAMINER

House Probers Hear Officer Told to Deny Motion Four Days Before Hearing.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The house committee investigating the national labor board was told that secret instructions on procedure were sent from Washington to a trial examiner in Kentucky four days before he started hearings in an American Rolling Mill company case.

The committee received testimony that board officials advised George Bokat, the examiner, to be prepared to deny a company motion that the hearing be held in Ashland, Ky., rather than Catlettsburg.

The CIO steel workers' organizing committee on Dec. 7, 1837, had charged that the company had violated the Wagner act.

Edmund M. Toland, committee counsel, placed in the record a letter from George O. Pratt, chief trial examiner, to Bokat, transmitting a communication from Philip G. Phillips, NLRB regional director at Cincinnati.

Pratt asked Bokat to destroy the Phillips letter and Bokat, called to the committee witness stand, said he did.

Phillips told Pratt that although the hearing had been set for Catlettsburg, he had refused the company's request for a transfer to Ashland.

"Investigation discloses," Phillips' letter said, "that there is quite likely to be demonstrations and what-have-you of a type similar to those previously run into in company towns, if the hearing were held in Ashland. This I know we do not want to have. I explained to the company that we like to hold our hearings in federal court buildings and did not mention the real reason for my refusal.

"I think you had better tip the trial examiner off as the motion will be renewed before him and the company will tell all about the great convenience that holding the hearing in Ashland will entail. The attorneys for the board will be unable to give the real reasons for objecting."

GANNETT RUNS FOR PRESIDENT

New York Publisher Declares Nation Must Get Rid of New Dealers.

(By Associated Press)

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—A battle for New York's powerful bloc of 92 votes towards the Republican presidential nomination is assured with the candidacy of publisher Frank Gannett.

Several weeks after Manhattan's District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey entered the race, the upstate Republican leader, former chairman of the Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, announced he would run at a civic testimonial dinner last night.

"My answer is yes," Gannett replied to several speakers who urged him to run. " x x x it is a call to duty that no citizen can ignore."

The publisher's candidacy is backed by a bloc of upstate "Grass Roots" Republicans. An avowed opponent of the New Deal, he continued his attack in his address last night declaring:

"The only way to stop them (New Dealers) is to get rid of them."

Gannett announced through the mail today his resignation as the Constitutional Government committee chairman in favor of former Congressman Samuel B. Pettingill of Indiana, and as a member of the board of directors of the Associated Press.

In Washington, a prediction that the Florida delegation to the Democratic national convention would back President Roosevelt for a third term came from Senator Pepper (D., Fla.).

His statement, made soon after an announcement that Ohio delegates would be in the Roosevelt camp if their "favorite son," Senator Donahey, failed to develop strength, kept the capital talking about the draft-Roosevelt movement.

MISSOULA, Mont.—(AP)—A demand by Montana university's president that five professors resign stirred up a heated campus feud in which faculty members accuse him of calling them "hasbeens, deadwood, malcontents and communists."

Forty faculty members petitioned the state board of education to investigate President George Finlay Simmons' administration, charging he "has failed as an administrator of the affairs of the institution" and made them fear for their jobs.

H. G. Merriam, a faculty member, in a letter to the board from Oregon, charged Simmons "broke the morale" of the Montana faculty.

Lennes declared he had learned Dr. Simmons told a legislative subcommittee "some (faculty members) are able, some are hasbeens, some deadwood, some malcontents, some perverts, some socialists and some communists."

Mansfield News-Journal
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1940.

It seems that if the Dionne quintuplets are to be at the New York fair it will be necessary to defy Dafoe.

You'll also notice that those folks who think about feeding wild birds when the ground is covered by snow are almost invariably good neighbors and good citizens.

Recent excavations in Texas lead to belief that man existed on this continent 25,000 years ago—and he may have been quite well satisfied until he was "discovered."

What Next For Mansfield?

NOW that the railroad passenger station improvements are to come along soon—after many years of effort—the question arises as to what other quite generally recognized need of Mansfield should be concentrated upon until finally accomplished.

Practically all civic improvements which Mansfield now has were brought about through development of an idea around which public sentiment was built up to the extent of eventual majority approval and final achievement.

Several noteworthy examples of such procedure are within the recollection of all except recent comers to the city. There was, for instance, years of preliminary work before the time became ripe for a money-raising campaign to finance General hospital, which had been needed long before it was built, little more than twenty years ago.

That was also the case in the hotel building project, which had been a dream of a few forward-looking citizens many years in advance of erection of the Mansfield-Leland hotel about fourteen years ago.

Senior high school's completion, thirteen years ago, was preceded by long-extended efforts in that behalf, with use of the old high school, corner Fourth and Bowman streets, for a number of years after it had become inadequate for the purpose.

The two fine new junior high schools, now nearing readiness for occupancy, also emphasize the requirement of looking well ahead in city planning for future needs.

Now, it would appear that, aside from continued efforts to find a way to reconstruct and modernize the city's water and sewer systems, the most urgent need, in contributing to the convenience and safety of a considerable percentage of Mansfield's population, is the north-south highway in the west part of the city, to provide an overhead crossing of the Erie and B. & O. railroads.

While this has been talked about for a third of a century the project has not yet reached a tangible stage, as to engineering and financing—but this can be done through united effort on the part of those most directly concerned, and with the interested co-operation of city officials, the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations.

The fact that so many other needed civic improvements have already been brought about by concerted activity encourages belief that this can also be done if a majority of Mansfield people will "set their minds to it."

More Permanent Jobs

ALONG with desire to get employment is an interest in the reasonable permanency of the job, for there is probably no more upsetting influence to which employes are subjected than constant fear of being "fired."

In one city where there was marked business improvement through much of 1939, the state employment service center makes a job report with encouraging aspects. Not only were the placements for each month of 1939 greater than those of the corresponding month of 1938, but 65 per cent of them came under the classification of "permanent positions."

A permanent job is not necessarily a life job. It is one with good prospects of continuing for some time, and in which the worker may feel secure if he is able to do the work satisfactorily. This is the sort of opportunity WPA workers and people on other forms of relief long for. The job that may last only a week or two before it folds up and throws them back on public assistance—in some places putting them at the bottom of lines in which they had previously been near the top—is the one they have been afraid to take.

Suggest Feminine President

WESLEYAN COLLEGE in Macon, Ga., creates an interesting diversion in the political battle for the presidency now under way. The girls there say they are opposed to a third term for Franklin D. Roosevelt, but they propose Eleanor Roosevelt as his successor.

Probably Eleanor hasn't been consulted about that. And it isn't likely that anything will come of it. But the proposal raises some interesting questions. There may be a woman president some time, and if that time comes, the question is likely to arise, whether the stateswoman so honored will be president in her own right, or will represent her husband. There was a situation of that sort in one of the southern governorships a few years ago.

It would be a duplication, within the frame of our democratic institutions, of the situation in England when Victoria was queen and her husband was merely the "royal consort." Whether any husband of an American stateswoman would efface himself so completely as Albert did is an interesting question. And it surely would be difficult in the case of a political-minded statesman who himself had occupied the office.

Sympathy From Ethiopia

ETHIOPIANS cannot help the Finns in spite of great sympathy for them, because they are so busy with their own "heroic resistance against the aggressor in several parts of the country." At least, that is what the former Emperor of Ethiopia said in a recent telegram to the League of Nations at Geneva.

It is something of a shock to the newspaper readers to have Haile Selassie reappear in the news in this way. Things have moved so fast since he left his country in the hands of the Italian conqueror—although it was less than four years ago—that his plight and that of his people are almost forgotten.

The Ethiopian ruler was always good at stating his case, and apparently even in exile he remains anxious to keep it before the world. His sympathy for the Finns may be accepted as quite sincere. The Ethiopians know what modern war is. They lost, but they put up an amazing fight against aggression and held off conquest for a year or two with very primitive weapons.

That "abolish interest" organization, active a couple of years ago, may have had the federal debt in mind—as the interest on forty-five billions is quite a sizable amount.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Harry's is a bar somewhere in New York. There is nothing to distinguish it from hundreds of other bars throughout the city. It is neither better nor worse than any of the others. Highballs cost 40c. Sandwiches cost 25c. The coffee is poor. There is an electric nickel-slot phonograph which plays records. The taste in ballads here runs to cowboy laments. The tablecovers and the napkins are blue and red checked. Nobody ever gets hurt in Harry's bar. Nothing ever happens there, as the doctor in Grand Hotel would say.

Several days ago a man came in about 2 p. m. and had a couple of beers. He kept looking at his watch. Pretty soon a friend joined him and they had another beer. After about ten minutes the friend said, "This next one is on me."

"I've got to be hurrying. I've got to meet my kid."

"It'll only take a minute—here, two beers."

So they had their beers, and the man got up and went away. He had to go somewhere to meet his kid.

I haven't the faintest idea who he is. But I would recognize him if I ever saw him again. He had a half-moon scar on his left cheek, and one of the fingers was missing from his left hand.

Next morning in the tabloids the picture of a strangely familiar face kept staring out of page three. He held the limp figure of a child in his arms. It was his "kid." She had run out against the light, and a truck got her.

IN HIS new book, "A Smattering of Ignorance," Oscar Levant devotes a chapter to Harpo Marx which is titled, "Memoirs of a Mute." In it Levant relates his experiences with Harpo and how he once gave the comic a ticket to a Gershwin concert after Harpo had attempted vainly to crash the stadium. Harpo at once extended a warm invitation to Levant to visit him in Hollywood. When Oscar finally decided to accept, Harpo wired him that he had no room. Levant went anyway, but he and Harpo went for months without speaking.

Not far from this office is a display of old silver, some of it from the middle centuries. One item in particular that impresses is an ancient teapot with a handle made from a stag's antler. It came from Sherwood forest. No one knows the full history of the relic, but it was in use of couple of centuries before the Revolutionary war. An interesting paper could be written on all the people whose fingerprints have been momentarily recorded on that beaten old silver!

I JUST happened to think. I didn't get a single necktie for Christmas.

Eggnog should be made well in advance of serving—but then I wonder. I had an eggnog party recently and 65 people came. But I didn't have a chance to get at it early. In fact, I got in around six o'clock in the morning and started in. After working hard (?) all day and all night, try beating five dozen eggs until they stand. The people were to start arriving by ten o'clock. I just got through in time. There wasn't a single complaint.

Orange Juice as Bone-Builder.

—By DR. CLENDENING

Does orange juice have any effect on bone and tooth building?

Recent experiments have proved that fruit juices containing vitamin C activate the deposit of calcium. Formerly it was supposed that vitamin D, which is found in fatty foods, was exclusively responsible for the mechanism of the deposit of calcium in the bones and teeth.

Lanford's experiments showed that orange juice is an effective aid in this mechanism. In experimental animals growth alone was promoted 10 per cent by the addition of orange juice to the basic diet, and it was shown by volumetric estimation that the amount of calcium ash in the body showed a distinctly higher per cent of calcium in animals fed in abundance of orange juice over those where orange juice was excluded from the diet.

Even when the content of calcium in the food is lower than normal, its utilization is greater when orange juice is fed than when the diet is high in calcium and no orange juice is taken.

These experiments substantiate the clinical observation of Chaney and Blunt that orange juice favors the retention of calcium in growing children.

Why do complexions suffer in the winter time?

For two reasons. In the first place, overdoing the daily bath idea. In hot and warm weather the luke-warm bath, even with heavy soaping, removes a great deal of detritus and improves the function of the skin. In cold weather, when the skin secretions are more or less dried up, it tends to dry the skin excessively and cause cracking and scaling. The same effect is produced, particularly on the skin of the face, by going out from the exceedingly hot, dry rooms of the American home and office building in winter to the outside cold. This is the second reason.

I believe the inside of the American house is more uncomfortable and unhealthier in winter time than it is in the summer time.

Timely Editorial

To Check Frauds.

The federal government seems to be going as far as experience permits in efforts to curb the falsification, forging or misuse of American passports. The scope of this evil, with special reference to the activities of international spies, has been only too clearly indicated in recent years.

An elaborate system of thumb print markings to check and recheck passports is provided in new regulations announced at Washington. Yet it is probable that the time limitation of six months and issuance for travel only in specified countries will do as much or more toward controlling an illegitimate traffic in American passports that has assumed dangerous proportions. While the new regulations may not wipe out the evil, they should help.—Philadelphia Inquirer

Love's the Angel That Unlocks Each Door.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THAT grand scramble Christmas morning! You know how it goes. Everyone opening bundles . . . reading messages . . . laughing, crying, calling across the room. Everyone gay and excited!

Until, presently, something slight but heavy lay in my own hands. Oddly heavy. A joke, perhaps? I wondered. Then I broke the seals and found—an angel! A slender, iron angel with a halo 'round her face and slim hands raised in welcome.

An iron angel for my door. I'd never had a gift like this before. A lovely thing for any lonely door—or lonely heart!

"From Tarbie," said the card. Dear Tarbie, whose bright friendship has become as much a part of Christmas as the twinkling wreaths and stars.

"It's so like Tarbie!" said I to myself. "As though she sent her own bright spirit to our door!" And then a deeper understanding came. "Like Tarbie, yes. But more—much more than that. Like Love—all Love that comes a-knocking at all doors, on Christmas Day or any other time. Like Love—that's plain as iron, and as strong, made up of simple, kindly words and deeds . . . yet blessed with such bright magic that its touch can heal and open any heart or door."

And I went on thinking about Love and what a wonderful thing it is. So plain and yet so potent. More powerful than any of the great things for which we rack our lives. There's Money, for instance. And Success . . . and Fame. Yet none of these can quicken broken hearts or wake our first young faith and fire again. They knock and knock upon our stout, sealed doors but nothing stirs. Their knocking is in vain.

And I thought of all the weary hearts I'd known who were needing Love's knock. Hurt and hopeless ones, bitter and bewildered, angry and terrified . . . waiting, every one of them, for release from pain.

What could wake them? What could free them? What could make them whole again?

ONLY LOVE!

LOVE ALONE COULD WAKE THEM . . . FREE THEM . . . MAKE THEM WHOLE!

Love—there's the answer to our fear and pain. The only true and lasting answer. Money isn't the answer. Fighting isn't the answer. Fame and fortune, they're all futile in the end. Only Love will open every door. And anyone can love.

You don't have to be powerful to love. Nor clever. Nor rich nor wise. You need only be KIND.

KINDNESS—THAT'S THE KEY TO EVERY DOOR!

LOVE'S THE ANGEL THAT UNLOCKS EACH HEART.

Ohio Anecdotes

Early Conservationist.

A pioneer in restocking Ohio waters with food fish was John H. Klippart who suggested such a movement some 70 years ago.

Klippart was an agricultural writer and was secretary of the Ohio State board of agriculture for nearly 20 years. During this period he received many assignments, among them being state commissioner to Massachusetts to report on cattle. In 1865 he was sent abroad to study the European institutions for teaching practical and technical agriculture and to observe systems of agricultural practice in Europe and Great Britain.

Because of his advocacy of supplying fish to Ohio waters he was appointed state fish commissioner in 1873.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Keeping One's Distance.

Used figuratively for maintaining an attitude of reserve, this metaphor, which made its debut in the English language in an old work, Lady Alimony, published in 1659, is thought by many to be traceable to French usage, in turn, said to have originated in an old royal decree.

This edict forbade body contact between dancers, the kingly prescription in this regard being that dancers must not come closer to each other than four inches. The devotees of Terpsichore, therefore, had to keep their distance, under penalty of fine, imprisonment or both—which perhaps is how dead letter laws started.

A Cold Day

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WE WERE talking about the recent "cold spell."

"Winters don't get as cold as they used to, nor so snowy," my neighbor said. "I'll never forget the winter of '17. I drove a sleigh into the village nearly every day and worked at a garage. I had a new sleigh, and the other fellows would borrow it to drive around while I was at work. I never cared so long as they brought it back before I was ready to go home, at six o'clock.

"One day my wife phoned in and asked me to start home early for it was fearfully cold, and bring a long list of groceries for one of the neighbors and a quarter's worth of tobacco for another. It was too cold, she said, for them to go to town.

"I'd worked inside all day and I hadn't thought it was much worse than usual, but when I looked at the thermometer it registered 20 below zero.

"Well, I put on my heavy coat and two pair of mittens. I made two or three trips to the grocery before I got everything loaded into the sleigh. Then I tucked myself in with the fur robe underneath and another big blanket over that. I had a sealskin cap with eartabs and a big muffler tied around my chin. Around the bend outside of town the wind hit me and fairly took my breath. Then I knew it was cold. Nothing stopped that wind. A human being just couldn't take it. But I kept on goin', head down and chin up, if you know what I mean. They told me afterward that mine was the only rig to travel that road that day.

"I put the tobacco in the old man's mailbox and delivered the groceries to the other place. It was blizzarding so that I could hardly see. Maybe the horse couldn't either, anyhow, the sleigh got out of the track where the snow was deepest and plumb upset. I sprawled out into a drift, with the horse flounderin' and rarin' to go. I couldn't unhitch the tugs and keep hold of the mare, so I got the belly band open and let her pull out from under the harness.

"The sleigh stayed there in the drift and I led the horse a half mile up the road to a hitchin' post. The neighbors there said 'Come in and warm,' but I wasn't cold. I went back and gathered up the stuff. It was one of those patent sleighs that come apart. It was easy to drop the upholstery into the frame in sections—and just as easy, I found out, for it to drop out when the sleigh turned over. I gathered up the pieces and all the robes and my own batch of groceries and pulled everything back to where I'd left the horse. Again they asked me in, but I couldn't leave the mare, so I drove on home.

"Gosh, how my hands and face and feet did sting when I got by the fire! I peeled off for weeks. It was really a cold day, but I didn't rightly know it until afterwards."

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The various state presidential primaries are going to be no help in breaking the president's silence on the third term question.

Political leaders were counting on these contests to force him to show his hand. But he has worked out a canny strategy to outwit them.

Private word has gone out from the White House to third-term boomers that the president is not sanctioning the entry of his name in any primary where the state law requires a personal authorization from a candidate. On the other hand, nothing will be done to stop any slate of pledged delegates in states where the permission of candidates is not needed.

In other words, "He ain't sayin' yes and he ain't sayin' no"—as usual.

This wily evasion was put to first use last week in meeting an undercover situation that had developed in Ohio. This state requires candidates to make written declarations, and a number of state leaders made a secret drive to persuade Roosevelt to enter the primary. They assured him of a hands-down victory, and argued that by sweeping Ohio he would torpedo all the other Democratic hopefuls, thus ensure his certain domination of the convention.

The president couldn't see it. Two long private conferences with Charles West, former under secretary of the interior, who acted as emissary of the Ohio leaders, failed to produce any results. Roosevelt didn't irrevocably shut the door on his running again, but he did definitely tell West he was not entering any state primary.

Note—Ohio third-termers now are working to put up a stalking-horse "favorite son" candidate who would be for another term for Roosevelt.

Prayer for Two.

THERE is a certain well-known society maiden in Washington who can tell you—but probably won't—just what the mysterious Chinese inscription on her treasured antique jade pendant means. She got the answer from Dr. Hu Shih, learned and courtly Chinese ambassador, at the White House diplomatic reception.

He complimented her on the rarity and beauty of the exquisite neckpiece, and she asked him if he could decipher the inscription.

"I've long wanted to know what it means," she said. "But no one seems to be able to translate it. Is it really Chinese? I've almost decided it's not."

"Oh, yes, it's Chinese," replied Dr. Hu Shih. And after studying it a few moments, he inquired, "You really wish to know what it means?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Then, Madame, I can tell you. It is a prayer for twins."

Monopoly Lobbyists.

CONGRESS has been in session only a week, but already insurance and other business lobbyists are busy harpooning the anti-monopoly committee. They are using crafty strategy.

Instead of attacking the committee head-on, which would give the liberals the chance to raise the cry of "Wall Street interference," the lobbyists are using the popular demand for economy to cut off its funds.

The monopoly committee needs $200,000 to complete its inquiries and publish a score of sensational reports which will make juicy reading in a number of key industries.

It's these reports, containing a great wealth of secret data and figures unearthed in the committee's year and a half investigation, that the business moguls are shooting at. Big business doesn't want the reports to get out, and if the committee can be kept from getting the necessary funds, the reports never will be published.

First showdown on the issue soon will take place at a meeting of the committee called by Chairman Joe O'Mahoney.

"Der Tag."

MANY an ambassador comes to Washington and goes again, leaving no more trace than a faint aroma of champagne and cigars. Carlos Martins will be remembered for something more substantial.

As ambassador of Brazil, Martins has been applying his ebullient personality, plus his skill as an astute businessman to a project which would open rich mineral resources in Brazil and profit his countrymen and North Americans alike.

Last year the United States Steel Corporation sent experts to Brazil to examine deposits of iron and coal, with the idea of establishin a steel industry there. The experts found the resources ample and President Vargas willing.

The undertaking would cost the tidy sum of $35,000,000, but, unlike most Yankee exploitations of the past, it envisages joint U. S. and Brazilian participation. It would give Brazil the chance to manufacture steel needed in its own industry, instead of consuming its foreign exchange for purchases from abroad.

Discussions have now moved from Rio to Washington, New York, and Pittsburgh. Martins, with his able financial attache, Eudico Penteado, has conferred with U. S. government officials and with U. S. Steel. And today is "Der Tag." For in Pittsburgh the finance committee of U. S. Steel is meeting to pass upon the project.

The outcome is being watched as a test of whether the big talk about inter-American co-operation can get down to the bed rock of forward-looking business relations.

Merry-Go-Round.

WARMLY appreciative, Alf Landon has traveled thousands of miles to make speeches in small towns because certain men living in them befriended him in the 1936 campaign. . . . Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the potent finance committee, drew a personal note of praise from the president for his proposal of a joint congressional committee to study both government expenditures and taxes as a preliminary to drafting new tax legislation. . . . Being mayor of New York is a far cry from dirt farming, but according to the Farm Bureau, Fiorello LaGuardia is one of the best friends the farmer has. In connection with the Farm Bureau's current membership drive, LaGuardia is credited with giving behind-the-scene help to Ed O'Neil, FB president, in putting through the crop parity payment bill last year, by linking up labor congressmen hostile to the legislation. . . . Decorations in the office of Joe Martin, house Republican floor leader, leave no doubt of his political persuasion. Scattered about are no less than ten bronze elephants presented by admirers.

CARTOON MOVIE PROVIDES NEW COLOR CONTEST

Scene From 'Gulliver's Travels' Subject of Theater Event; Tickets Go to Winners.

The second full length feature animated cartoon movie, "Gulliver's Travels," comes to the Madison theater Saturday for four days. The first of these cartoons was "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and opened a new chapter in movie history.

Gulliver, you may remember, was the English sailor-adventurer who was shipwrecked and cast ashore on the Island of the Lilliputians, the diminutive people who were not over six inches tall. Gabby, the town crier of Lilliput, is to the story what Dopey was to "Snow White."

The little people work like ants to bind and build derricks that will lift the giant so that he can be taken before the king. The adjoining cartoon is of Gulliver, the human giant, being borne to the king. He has picked up the important little town crier and is examining him.

Offers 20 Tickets.

The Madison is offering 20 guest tickets for the best coloring of the cartoon shown here. Four tickets each will be given to the first two prize winners and a pair of tickets will be given to each of the next six winners.

The contest opens today and closes at 6 p. m. Friday. Guest tickets for "Gulliver's Travely" will be mailed to winners in time for them to see the show during its run at the Madison.

The contest is open to everyone and the coloring may be done in water colors or with crayon. The name and address of contestants must be on every entry. The entries must be sent to The News-Journal, care of the Motion Picture editor and they must be postmarked not later than Friday, 6 p. m. in order to be considered in the contest. No entries can be returned and the decision of the judges will be final.

Middleton Family, New Westinghouse Film, Booked Here

"The Middleton Family at the New York World's Fair," produced by Westinghouse, will have its first local run Wednesday and Thursday at the Madison theater. Movie critics have acclaimed this as one of the finest pictures of the year of its type. Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company produced this picture which dramatically portrays the opportunities that await youth in the World of Tomorrow.

Against a background that is replete with color and pageantry a romantic story unfolds that has an especial appeal to parents and growing youngsters. The story concerns the Middletons—a typical American family in New York for the Fair.

Every foot of this five-reel feature picture is in technicolor. Most of the shots were made on the Fair grounds with the result that the film has captured all the color and pageantry of the exposition.

Dealing with youth and its problem of finding a place in a troubled world, it offers a powerful antidote to the defeatist philosophy. Yet with all its serious intent this engrossing picture is studded with sparkling lines and humorous situations.

Point Roberts, a peninsula jutting into the sea from Canadian territory near Vancouver, B. C., is under the American flag.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring spots affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin often result from a temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing.

You can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment whose medication stays in active contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For nearly 45 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritated o ducts where many surface pimpl start, and aids healing. Carefully cleansing the skin with Resinol Soap helps to quicken the pleasing results. Its gently active lather is refreshing and it rinses easily.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample, write Resinol, Dept. S9, Baltimore, Md.

Berni Vici Brings New Stage Show To City Saturday

Count Berni Vici, theatrical producer and orchestra director, whose dazzling stage show had Mansfield theatergoers breathless when it played here over a year ago, will bring his new show to the Ohio Saturday and Sunday.

The Berni Vici show is remembered for its many and impressive stage settings and drops, including the docking of the Queen Mary. This year's edition, "Comedie Francaise," has 24 stage spectacles on terraced and revolving stages. He carries approximately 70 people in his show, including an all-girl orchestra.

One of his biggest attractions this year is lifted from the New York World's Fair. Yvette Dare, who is billed as "the gorgeous half caste Balinese" and her "sacred parrot" thrilled visitors at the fair this past summer with her "Dances of Bali."

The cast includes, besides Miss Dare and the girl orchestra, a chorus of 16 girls, Carl Emmy's ten Mad Wags; Ted Waldman and Susie; Billy Farrell and company; William Gutherie and Lucy Boots; Kathryn Welch and Billy Taylor; Charlotte Ahlgren who presides at the electric organ, and Lemore O'Neil who plays the Novachord.

MEN WHO AREN'T AFRAID TO GROW OLD

Bob Tuttle had a dream when he first came to work for Standard Oil. He dreamed about ships—big, sturdy square-riggers that sailed to faraway ports—places with strange, musical names. Like most of us who have such dreams, Bob tucked his away—put it in a corner of his memory that some day he would explore and enjoy to its fullest.

Today "Old Bob" is reliving that dream on a Standard Oil pension. As he carves and whittles—paints and refinishes his brave little ship, he can hear the winds whistling through the rigging—can feel the tangy, salty spray whip up over the decks.

And Bob Tuttle will continue to live out those dreams until the day when he finally reaches the last port of call. For "Old Bob," after his years of faithful service to you and to Standard Oil, is enjoying security and comfort with an independent income that Standard's pension plan provides for him.

Yes, at Standard Oil every man is his own "Bob Tuttle"—enjoying life and his daily job—cherishing dreams to come true—not afraid to grow old!

FOR EVERY 100 PEOPLE in the Standard Oil "family," seven are now retired and living on company pensions. And because the retirement age is between 55 and 65, these men have many years of work-free comfort to enjoy. Three men, for example, lived on Standard Oil pensions for 26 years; five others for 24 years; another for 22 years.

253 of our active employees have been with the company for over 25 years, and 1,667 from 10 to 24 years inclusive.

["Bob Tuttle" isn't a real name, but his story is typical of all the Standard Oil men in Ohio now enjoying pensions.]

Shopping Around...

With MARIANNE

Marianne

ALTHOUGH winter really seems to be here in earnest, at least according to the weather outdoors, springtime is invading milady's wardrobe at quite a rate of speed. . . . Soft shades of rose are leading most other colors in the parade, and I saw an ever-so-smart one of lightweight wool while shopping yesterday—it was fashioned with front fullness in the skirt, a peter pan collar of white angora and piping of the same on the short sleeves made the dress ideal for office or informal afternoon wear. . . . Another tailored lightweight wool combined white pin stripes on a nile green background in a full-skirted frock with a double-breasted bodice. . . . Something a little bit unusual is the pastel tinted blue dress which has the blouse front brightened with a shade of cyclamen—and the pockets of the skirt harmonizing with it.

* * *

Of course if you'd rather not have a light shaded gown so early in the season—and black is still your favorite color, you're sure to like the bolero ensemble one of the downtown stores is showing now—the black crepe skirt is topped with a floral printed blouse in shades of red, blue, yellow and green on a white background. . . . Then a wide red girdle and black bolero add the finishing touches.

* * *

Now if you're heading south soon, you'll want some light, spring-like dresses for the trip—or, if you like to do your shopping early when the time affords it, you may want to pick up one of these frocks for wear later on in the spring. . . . A smart aqua and white striped jersey dress is tailored with a shutter-pleated skirt, which forms a solid shade of aqua at the waist line—a dubonnet belt and trim at the neck give added color to the frock. . . . Something practical with a wool jacket, was the brown, luggage and white checked dress topped with a collarless wool jacket in the luggage shade, which closed with bright gold hooks. . . . A costume suit of blue perosa combines a dress trimmed with quilting and a matching fitted coat trimmed with the same quilted design.

* * *

THE LOCAL SHOPS have purses and gloves to match these light shaded costumes—and they can be used to good advantage to brighten up your darker winter clothes. . . . The purses are a variety of shapes in sculptured calf, suede, pigtex and patent leather. . . . The shades of these have such intriguing names as Hawaii rose, lime peel, turquoise, jewel gold, coral—oh yes, and red. . . . The patent purses can be had only in black and red. . . . Then fabric gloves in all these shades, as well as pale pink and blue, gray, navy and tango red, also are new and smart.

* * *

Right about now you can bid goodbye to a chapped complexion, shiny nose and a dry skin, because a leading woman cosmetic manufacturer has just introduced her new "featherlight" foundation cream—which is designed especially for young complexions (and, in fact, all delicate skins) to form a thin protective film and retain makeup for hours at a time. . . . It can be purchased in three flattering shades—natural, rachel and rose rachel.

* * *

A PERFUME HOUSE, whose line is the popular one of early American spice scents, has a clever new package on the market now. . . . It's called a "passtime packet"—which is of heavy, pink-tinted paper tied with bright red grosgrain ribbon and printed with colorful colonial figures. . . . Inside there is soap, cologne and talc—but best of all, a set of transfer designs for two towels and a pair of curtains—with quaint early American scenes and figures to be embroidered in gay bright colors.

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p. m.—Canal 4251.

Yearns for Bachelor Ease

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was almost 40 years of age when I married a girl ten years younger than I. She is ideal in every way—a good wife, perfect mother and the best of housekeepers. My happiness is more than I deserve. Every once in a while I yearn for the slipshod ease of bachelorhood, and wish I had a cubby-hole in which I could be as messy and untidy as I please.

When I throw newspapers around the floor, or come to the table in my dressing gown and slippers, or leave cigar stubs around, my wife only says it's hard to raise the children to be neat, when their adored father is untidy. She isn't the scolding kind, but this problem is beginning to get ony my nerves.

BENEDICT.

I know it's hard for a bachelor husband to live up to the standards of a thoroughly tidy young wife. But just think of your compensations. Your wife refers to you as an adored father; if you had remained a bachelor, you'd probably be as lonesome as you were untidy.

Why not ask her to let you have an occasional slipper and dressing gown evening? If she's a sensible person, she'll agree to this.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I stepped past her and closed the door. Then I drew up a low chair facing mine—I also knew the effect which having to look up to another person's face had upon rebellious youth—and I sat down in my own chair before I spoke.

"Sit down, Olina," I said quietly, looking directly into her eyes.

She clutched at the remnants of her regal poise and tried to pull them together.

"I prefer to stand," she said haughtily, but her voice trembled. "I am sorry," I said, measuredly, but infusing as much kindness into my voice as I dared in the face of her patently rising hysteria, "but I cannot say anything to you while you are standing, and in the frame of mind you are now. If you will sit down and relax both your nerves and your muscles, I think I can dispel many of your doubts."

She glared at me for an instant, and her fingers twitched with the evident impulse to claw.

"You—you!" she stammered in fury, but I made no reply, simply sat looking steadily at her with what Dicky sometimes teasingly calls my "cowing look," with which he says I reduce Junior and Roderick to dust.

Just as I was sure that I had come to an impasse, and was wondering what next to do, her temper and obstinacy broke, and fairly throwing herself into the chair, she put her hands over her face and broke into a very passion of sobs.

My course was clear now, a familiar chartered one. For a while I sat still without speaking, letting her "cry her heart out," knowing that she would resent any tenderness or sympathy from me, and knowing also that this outburst of tears would be a great relief to her.

Finally the paroxysm diminished, and when her tearing sobs changed to deep quivering breaths, and with one hand over her eyes, she began to grope for her tiny handkerchief, I rose and put into her fingers one of Dicky's big linen kerchiefs. Then I brought a glass of water to her side, and waited while she wiped her eyes and her face.

"Drink this," I said, with my voice carefully impersonal, "and then rest for a minute or two. When you are ready to listen to me, I think I can tell you some things which may ease your mind."

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Jan. 18.

Very productive and enterprising conditions are presaged for this day, according to the lunar and mutual aspects. There may be much stress and excitement, probably in the effort to put over new and original programs. Innovation, radical change in methods and technique prove factors in promoting progressive propositions in which capital or influence from high places may be easily obtained on the basis of merit and practicality. The mind will be attuned to surprisingly novel and constructive levels in fresh fields.

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to a very progressive and productive year, with much energy and talent applied to putting over major programs. Originality, novelty and improved techniques will attract proper support and capital for promotion. The mind will be keyed to innovation and creative ability, receiving due recognition and profit. Personal affiliations also give happiness and gratification.

A child born on this day may have much creative ability and originality.

Dealing With Our Handicaps

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

IN THE United States there are 6,000,000 malnourished children; 3,000,000 who are hard of hearing; 1,000,000 with weak and damaged hearts; 1,000,000 with defective speech; 850,000 with "suspicious tuberculosis;" 382,000 with tuberculosis; 675,000 who are delinquent, nervous or emotionally unstable; 450,000 who are mentally retarded; 50,000 who have partial sight; 14,400 who are blind, and 18,212 who are deaf.

"And what of the 1,500,000 gifted children? Are they not handicapped, too?" I asked of Mrs. Dorothy E. Norris, in charge of the Major Work Classes (of gifted children) in the Cleveland, Ohio, public schools, and president of the International Council for Exceptional Children.

"There greatest handicap, if you call it such," she replied, "is placed upon them by people who do not set up an environment whereby they have the opportunity of developing to the limit of their ability, in order to make constructive use of their powers for the good of themselves and society."

Our Attitude.

When you and I see a handicapped child, our more primitive impulses prompt us to center our attention on the way he is different and to wonder how it happened. When, however, we act graciously and intelligently, we concern ourselves only with what may be done to help this child develop his greatest possibilities and to induce cheer, patience and courage in his parents; to influence our neighbors and the whole community to feel a responsibility for the proper care and protection of this child

In the last few decades we have made great progress in our public attitude toward the handicapped child and his parents, by providing special education financed by the local community, with increasing aid from state and federal funds.

Inspiring to me are those parents of handicapped children who have accepted these children as they are and have adjusted themselves accordingly.

I was talking to a friend in a hotel lobby when another friend of mine, a man of eminence in education and business, approached. After introductions, I asked this second friend about members of the family, purposely avoiding reference to Sammy (not his name). But he added, "And Sammy is fine, too." Then he turned to explain nonchalantly to the other man," "You know, I have a feeble-minded son" I was filled with admiration. I wish all parents of handicapped children would emulate that father. How much needless suffering might be escaped in this way!

Many parents and teachers dealing with the handicapped child at home and school suggest to us the possibilities of our doing better at understanding and guiding the so-called normal child.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q My girl, 10 years old, does not have the trouble with the simple number facts you often write about. Indeed, she is quick and accurate at mere adding, subtracting and the like. Her trouble is with verbal problems—to know whether to add, subtract, multiply or divide.

A. Then she does not read the problem carefully, to find out what it means. She may be a careless or poor reader. The chances are that she always is in too great hurry to read the entire problem, and that she looks from one number to another among the words and guesses it is an add, subtract, multiply or "guzinto" problem. Anything you can do to induce her to be more calm and careful as she attacks a problem should help her.

Q. At what age may it be well for a boy to begin piano lessons?

A. At about six or seven. While finger strength and control are lower then than at nine or ten, willingness to practice is higher. The child who before the age of ten has acquired considerable skill at the piano, can and will more readily resist the fear of being called a sissy.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE MARGIN OF SAFETY

IT IS, OF course, a general principle of contract that you and your partner want to bid up to game whenever game can be made. But when no game is in the deal, you should ordinarily prefer to buy the contract as cheaply as you can Thereby you may possibly eke out a smaller score "below the line" than if you were a bit higher, getting perhaps a partial score of 60 instead of 90 toward game, but you add an element of safety which you may require. How badly you feel when you bid three, only to find that you could barely have made two!

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South began this rubber deal with 1-Spade. West passed and so did North, although he could have been pardoned for giving a single raise if he knew South as a very conservative bidder. East kept the bidding alive wth 2-Clubs, whereupon South showed his other suit at 2-Hearts. This time North came in with 2-Spades, a mere shift from 2-Hearts and not in any sense a raise.

This encouraged South to make a mild try for game with 3-Spades, which North passed, and at that it was played. As the cards lay, the declarer lost one trick in spades, one in hearts, two in diamonds and one in clubs, so was down one. Had he not given that unjustified raise, he would have made a contract of 2-Spades and a nice little part score.

Had South figured a bit, he would have realized that his own hand was good for about three tricks in spades, two in hearts and probably one in clubs, a total of six. To take ten, he would have to find four in the hand of North, who had passed his opening bid and therefore could not have any such strength.

American Drama.

"Allegheny Uprising," starring Claire Trevor and John Wayne, who gave such brilliant portrayals in "Stagecoach," will be shown at the Madison theater today and Thursday. The desire of ordinary men to live in security, pitted against the desire of money-mad men to take profits where they can be found, is the underlying theme of the historical melodrama. The second feature is the "Middleton Family at the World's Fair," which is a Westinghouse presentation in technicolor.

Faye-Baxter Combination.

Alice Faye and Warner Baxter find perilous adventure in a remote American consulate besieged by fierce bandits in 20th Century-Fox's drama, "Barricade," which runs through Friday at the Ohio theater. This is the first time Miss Faye and Baxter have played together as a romantic team. How they escape danger, win exoneration and finally seek seclusion for their love makes for a thrilling conclusion.

Modern Jekyll and Hyde.

A modern Jekyll and Hyde "dead 18 years" who victimized a nation, is sensationally exposed by a daring girl reporter and her "woman-hating" editor in "News Is Made at Night" the 20th Century-Fox film which is being shown at the Ritz theater today and tomorrow. Preston Foster and Lynn Bari are the stars. One of the gayest and fastest college romances to reach the screen in many months, "Winter Carnival," co-starring Ann Sheridan and Richard Carlson, is the other feature.

Barrymore Plays Gramps.

In the role of the lovable, old, hard-bitten, outspoken Gramp is Lionel Barrymore, in "Borrowed Time," which is playing through Thursday at the Majestic theater. Heart-warming laughter, homely drama and suspense are joined in this picture. All the cast of "Four Daughters" are present again, with the addition of Fay Bainter in the role of the young and modern mother of the four girls in "Daughters Courageous," which is the second feature at the Majestic.

Behind the Scenes.

A chance to take a peek behind the Hollywood scenes is provided by "Stand-In," the comedy, starring Leslie Howard and Joan Blondell at the Park theater. A portrayal that will gain the sympathy of women is given by Joan Marion in the presentation of "Black Limelight," starring Raymond Massey, is the second feature. Massey has just completed his stage play, "Lincoln In Illinois," as a motion picture.

Enough cement was put into the Grand Coulee dam in September, 1939, to cover a football field to a depth of 265 feet, 25 stories high. The builders averaged 15,000 cubic yards a day, setting a world's record.

Norway, Sweden Send More Help to Finns.

COPENHAGEN Denmark. —(U.P.)—Russia's protests to Sweden and Norway against their aid to Finland have resulted only in a sudden increase in the number of volunteers for the Finnish army, reports said today.

It was estimated that more than 10,000 Swedes, almost equal to a Finnish division, had volunteered for service since the start of the Russo-Finnish war.

It was made known that Sweden, a country of 6,285,000 people, had given 9,000,000 kroner ($2,144,700) for Finnish aid.

This was in money, given by individuals.

Trucks were leaving Stockholm daily for the north, laden with clothes and goods for the Finns.

Finn Lines Hold On Russian Ground.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

WITH THE CENTRAL FINNISH FORCES IN RUSSIA.—(AP)—Here in the rugged, wooded hills east of Lieska, the "Snowbird" soldiers of Finland are holding a front five to 10 miles within Soviet Russia, guarding two vital highways, 45 miles apart.

By automobile, horse-drawn sled and floundering afoot through deep snow, I visited this front an hour after Finnish skiers had routed a patrol of 60 Russians in the marrow-chilling cold.

In parts of Finland, the cold ranged down to 51 degrees below zero making major military operations virtually impossible. It is the severest winter in 25 years.

On the Salla front, the Finnns yesterday were aroused by the stentorian voices of the red army political commissars, exhorting their troops.

With some of the soldiers shouting "Urraa!" about 100 Russians charged, while the commissars yelled encouragement from the trenches.

So intense was the cold that the attackers ran forward with their arms folded for warmth, rifles slung on their backs. Finnish machine-gunners held their fire until the Russians could be slaughtered most economically, and the charge broke. The number of dead was unknown.

Leaving Finnish troops billeted in a camouflaged tent, in a series of dugouts and in a sheltered farmhouse. I was taken on the narrow road by automobile past a village of which only blackened chimneys remained. We crossed a bridge which the Finnns were mining, and transferred to a low, two-passenger sled for four miles more.

On Russian soil, we prowled for more than an hour in a clearing beside a frozen lake.

The Finnish commanding colonel said that at the start of the war, the Russians were able to drive about 20 miles into Finland here, because both sides of the border for 30 miles had been demilitarized by agreement.
